Hurricane Veers From Florida Coast, Heads North

Danger to Miami Has Been Reduced, Say Weather Men; Wide Precautions Taken to Meet Disturbance

By the Associated Press.

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 19.—The Weather Bureau reported tonight a tropical hurricane in the Atlantic Ocean had changed its course and the "storm threat to the Florida East Coast has greatly diminished."

In a 9 p. m. (E. S. T.) advisory, the bureau said the storm, described as severe, had turned northwestward and "will probably recurve north northwestward or northward" during the next 24 hours.

Was Roaring Upon Florida

The change apparently took place this afternoon after the hurricane had moved directly toward the Florida East Coast at a rapid pace.

The bureau said the disturbance was centered at 7 p. m. about 420 miles due east of Miami, "attended by gales and squalls over large area and by hurricane winds near center."

A report from one ship that rode out the storm in the West Indies last night said the disturbance covered an area 240 miles in width.

Earlier today, when advices indicated the storm was threatening to strike the Florida mainland tomorrow, workers on land and sea moved swiftly to minimize dangers of the menace.

A State-wide emergency relief organization and the Red Cross augmented the efforts of private residents to prepare for any eventuality.

Shelters Made Ready

Shipping stayed in harbor. Waterfront property was fastened down. Public buildings were made ready to serve as shelters. Business and residential property was boarded up to protect it against high winds, flying debris and heavy rains.

The Coast Guard sent two radio trucks to Lake Worth, Fla., to aid relief organizations with emergency communications should wire facilities be disrupted.

Arthur B. Hale, chairman of the State road department and director of the combined relief agencies, said rescue squads, first aid supplies, rail, motor or boat evacuation facilities and emergency supplies for refugees could be sent into any affected area on short notice.

The Works Progress Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corps directed evacuation of all men in exposed places including camps on the keys.

The advancing hurricane was the first serious storm threat to the Florida mainland since a brief but severe September storm cut through the keys on Labor Day, 1935. About 500 persons were killed including many World War veterans who were building the oversea highway from the Florida mainland to Key West.

PAULINE FREDERICK.

Once Most Popular U. S. Actress Dies at 53; Divorced 4 Husbands, Buried Fifth

By the Associated Press.

Beverly Hills, Calif., Sept. 19.—Pauline Frederick, 53, famous star of the stage and silent pictures, died at her home today, apparently from asthma and a heart attack.

An inhalator squad worked for an hour over Miss Frederick in an effort to revive her.

She was first stricken by an asthma attack last Friday and had been under the care of a nurse and physician.

Miss Frederick was known on the stage as "the girl with the topaz eyes." She rose from the chorus ranks to become in her heydey, America's most popular actress. She was stately in carriage, black-haired and exceptionally talented.

Her private life was not so happy or successful. She had five marriages, four of them ending in divorce, and the fifth being cut short by death.

Miss Frederick was born Pauline Libbey at Boston, Mass., August 12, 1885. Her stage experience began in "Rogers Brothers in Harvard," an early extravaganza and her only adventure into musical comedy.

Among her outstanding stage dramas were:

"Joseph and His Brothers," "Innocent," "Samson" and "When Knighis Were Bold."

On the screen she appeared in "Za Za," "Madame X," "La Tosca," Roosevelt Sees Rail Heads Today In Strike Parley

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt appeared last night to have intervened personally in an effort to settle the $250,000,000 railway wage dispute on which a Nationwide strike ballot is being taken.

Members of the Railway Labor Executives' Association were called to a special meeting here this morning, after which Chairman George M. Harrison, of the association and some of his top-flight lieutenants will go to the White House for a conference with the President.

It also was understood that J. J. Pelley of the Association of American Railroads and other rail executives will see Roosevelt within the next 48 hours, and perhaps today.

O'Connor Faces Purge Test Today

4 States to Conduct Primaries; Interest Centers in New York Race Where a Close Contest Is Expected

A tight contest in the final "purge" attempt of the primary election season today highlights nominating balloting in four States.

Bitter campaigning has marked the efforts to defeat Representative John J. O'Connor, chairman of the House Rules Committee in retaliation for his blocking of the President's reorganization and wage and hour bills. James H. Fay carries the Presidential blessing against O'Connor, in the Democratic race and no matter who wins today it is possible that the same adversaries will contest for the seat in the November general elections.

O'Connor also is entered for the Republican nomination against Allen W. Dulles, and Fay holds the nomination of the American Labor Party.

The other contests, by States, which mark the final primary day of the 1938 season are:

New York

An additional 43 House members, 51 State senators and 150 State assemblymen, many without opposition, to be nominated. Nominations for Governor and Senator will be made in conventions next week.

Massachusetts

Gov. Charles F. Hurley (Democrat), seeking renomination, opposed by Lieut. Gov. Francis E. Kelley, former Gov. James M. Curley, and former Representative Richard M. Russell.

Republican gubernatorial nomination sought by Leverett Saltonstall, former State house speaker; Frederick Butler, William McMasters, with Towasend backing, and Richard D. Whitcomb.

Seven House members have opposition for renomination, eight are unopposed.

Many minor State offices also are at stake. There is no Senate nomination up this year.

New Jersey

Former Senator W. Warren Barbour is seeking the Republican nomination again, with C. Dan Coskey, industrial engineer, and George O. Pullen, electrical repair man, opposing him. William H. J. Ely, stanch New Dealer, is unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

All but one of the 13 members of the State's House delegation are unopposed in the primary, but there are G. O. P. contests in six districts and Democratic fights in five.

Wisconsin

Gov. Philip La Follette has one opponent, Glenn P. Turner, for Progressive renomination, but a coalition is seeking to nominate Robert

'Rose Bandit' Gets 7 to 21 Years for 22 Thefts Here

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue yesterday sentenced Ralph J. Nortner, 18, who confessed to being the "rose bandit," from 7 to 21 years imprisonment.

Nortner, who gave his address as 1101 Sixteenth street northwest, told police it was he who robbed houses and left a rose for his victims, who included Representative Edward C. Eicher, of Iowa. His sentence was one of three years on each of the seven charges to which he pleaded guilty.

Shortly after Representative Eicher was robbed officers caught Nortner at the wheel of an automobile that was reported stolen and arrested him. He confessed, under questioning, to 22 robberies here.

Parley Called to Settle Strike In Printing Office Cafeteria

Spokesmen for Government Printing Office employes and workers in the G. P. O. Cafeteria, all members off American Federation of Labor unions, strove last night to end a walkout staged by the cafeteria employes from the non-profit eating place maintained in the world's biggest printing office.

Preperations were made on both sides for a joint conference to discuss demands of the cafeteria employes for higher wages, fewer hours and longer vacations with pay.

The board of directors of the G. P. O. Cafeteria Recreation Association, which operates the cafeteria on behalf of printing office workers, appointed a negotiating committee consisting of the following: Russell H. Herrell, administrative assistant to Public Printer Augustus E. Giegengack; J. Thomas Ford, association president; Walter Browne, vice president; Ernest R. Taylor, second vice president, and Louis C. Vogt, treasurer.

Garland P. Webb business agent of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' Alliance, Local 781 said the union's negotiating committee and a small group of the employes would

2 Powers Ratify Deal to Give Hitler Bohemia; French Public 'Humiliated'

Paris Ministers Avoid Serious Split Despite Bitter Argument Over 'Surrender' to German Demands

By John Elliott.
Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Sept. 19.—The French cabinet today ratified the Chamberlain-Hitler plan for settlement of the dangerous Czech-Sudeten dispute, but only after a bitter ministerial argument. The decision left the country "humiliated" and indignant.

The plan provides for "amputation" of Sudeten areas of Czechoslovakia, followed by neutralization of the central European republic and abrogation of its treaties of assistance with France and Soviet Russia.

The ministry's decision was taken at a 90-minute meeting at the Elysee Palace after Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet had returned to Paris by air from London.

The communique issued subsequently stated that the "Council of Ministers unanimously gave its approbation to the declarations and the attitude of the prime minister and to the solutions proposed in accord with the British government."

Cabinet Split Averted

The adverb "unanimously" must be taken in a Pickwickian sense, meaning only that it was followed by no resignations from the government.

As a matter of fact the Chamberlain-Hitler proposals were fiercely fought by the "war party" in the cabinet, prominent among whom, it was understood was Paul Reynaud, minister of justice, and a member of the Center Party headed by former Premier Flandin, leader of the "peace at any price" movement, who published articles here and in Britain last week did more than any other single factor to produce the backdown of Britain and France before Hitler's show of force.

Others in the French Cabinet today who fought the Chamberlain plan were Georges Mandel, minister of colonies, who was once a close collaborator of "The Tiger" Georges Clemenceau; Henri Queuille, minister of agriculture, and Cesar Campinchi minister of the navy.

Nation "Humiliated"

A feeling of humiliation was uppermost throughout the country today, when the news of the government's acceptance of Hitler's terms became known. It was felt France had suffered the greatest diplomatic setback since the Kaiser's government forced Delcasse to resign as foreign minister in 1906.

L'Intransigeant expressed the situation this evening: "Hitler has no longer any reason for plunging Europe into war since he has obtained all that he demands without it."

The public indignation mounted when it became known Foreign Minister Bonnet, who only a fortnight ago, in dedicating a monument to Lafayette at Pointe de Grave, had solemnly reaffirmed France's loyalty

Kennedy Sends Children Out of Air Raid Zone

Boston, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—The younger children of United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy have been sent from London to southern Ireland as a precaution in case of "possible bombings in England in event of a sudden declaration of war," his father-in-law, former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, said today.

The Ambassador's wife told Fitzgerald of the precautionary measure in a transatlantic telephone conversation yesterday. Fitzgerald said his daughter also revealed that Joseph, jr., has taken a post at the United States Embassy at Paris

Star's Sister Wins $20,000 From Mother

Los Angeles, Sept. 19 (AP).—The District Court of Appeals affirmed today a $20,000 judgment obtained in Superior Court by Mrs. Margaret Fillmore against her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, who also is the mother of Mary Miles Minter, former screen star.

Mrs. Fillmore originally sued for $48,000, which she asserted her mother removed from a bank deposit box which they held jointly.

1,700 Attending Management Congress Here Cheer Delegate Who Asserts 'We Have the People, the Resources and the Arms' to Resist German Invasion

A wiry little Czech economist and truck-builder, thunderously cheered by 1,700 business management experts convened here, told reporters last night that Czechoslovakia will go to war rather than allow itself to be partitioned.

His eyes snapping behind heavy horn-rimmed spectacles, Dr. Emanuel Slechta, of Prague, representing at the seventh International Management Congress the little nation whose crisis is 1938's greatest, said spiritedly:

"We have the people, the resources and the arms. We are ready to fight.

"There will be war rather than partition.

"My country has been mentally prepared for this struggle by a thousand years of trouble.

"We ask nothing from the United States but spiritual support. We

Duce Expected to Give Position on Abrogation of Czech Pacts With Paris and Moscow

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Sept. 19.—Keeping Italy's views to the front in the fast-moving European crisis, Premier Benito Mussolini will address the world again tomorrow at Udine, in northeastern Italy.

Fascist newspapers forecast that tomorrow's speech would deal with developments since the premier's address in Trieste, when he said if war co es "Italy's place is already chosen."

Virginio Gayda, authoritative editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, who often expresses Il Duce's views, wrote today "Italy is ready to take up arms at Germany's side if a mad conflagration should explode over the Czechoslovak problem.

Another point on which Premier Mussolini has not yet spoken is Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's demand that Prague cut loose from her alliances with Moscow and Paris. The Italian press repeatedly has attacked thost alliances, however.

Il Duce entered Yugoslavia today for the first time. He crossed the frontier at Postumia for a brief visit during a tour of Julian Venetia Province.

Nazi Press Asks Destruction Of Czech State

Berlin Newspapers, in Bitter Headlines, Describe 'Oppression' of Sudetens

By Ralph Barnes.
Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Sept. 19.—Complete destruction of Czechoslovakia's state structure, with radical partition of the territory involved, seemed tonight to be Reichsfuehrer Hitler's revised demand as reflected in Nazi press comment.

In editorials couched in violent terms, German newspapers insist that, Czechoslovakia, this "cancer in the heart of Europe," must be blotted out. Obviously a potent factor in this serious new turn of events is the speech yesterday of Premier Mussolini at Trieste, in which he called for a plebescite for all minorities, and hinted broadly that in case of war Italy would side with Germany.

Any thought which London and Paris may have had that Hitler would accept a compromise solution of the dispute appears illusory. How, it is asked, could the Fuehrer accept a compromise solution when Il Duce calls for a "radical" solution? Mussolini, apparently, has succeeded in leading events to what

Sudetens Expected Hitler To March In After Speech

By the Associated Press.

Eger, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 19.—Sudeten Germans disclosed today they had planned a putsch against the Czechoslovak government to start immediately after Adolf Hitler's speech at Nuremberg last Monday night.

The putsch failed, however, when the government quickly put down "rebellions" Monday night and Tuesday and clamped martial law on Sudeten districts.

The Sudetens said the rank and file had expected Hitler to send troops across the border after his defiant declarations. When he did not and Sudeten Leader Konrad Henlein fled to Germany, the Sudents were left with a feeling of bewilderment and a tendency to hold Henlein responsible for bungling.

Both German nonparty members and Czech residents in the Sudeten areas expressed the belief that the abortive putsch had not split the Sudenten party's ranks as government quarters have indicated.

Henlein, on the other side of the frontier, now is asserting his leadership again. Despite the warrant

Prague Hears Proposals in Present Form Are Unacceptable to the Government; 12-Hour Session Brings No Decision; Play for Time Held Likely Course; Moscow Won't Help Unless Paris Does

The European Situation

PRAGUE—Czechoslovakia's deeply shocked cabinet postponed action on British-French demands. It was believed the country would ask to present its case to France and Britain, although sentiment was regarded as strong for outright rejection of proposals.

LONDON—British cabinet ratified Chamberlain-Hitler proposals as Britain's premier prepared to eet German chancellor soon.

Paris—French cabinet, after a bitter fight, ratified Chamberlain-Hitler plan as France reflected humiliation and indignation concerning proposals.

BERLIN—Germany prepared to increase her demands on Czechoslovakia, according to the Nazi press.

ROME—Mussolini prepared to address the world today at Udine in northeastern Italy.

GENEVA—Soviet Russia has refused to aid Czechoslovakia in case of German aggression unless France does so, it was reported as Soviet commissar made ready to address League of Nations on Wednesday

WARSAW—Poland warned Europe she refused to recognize any Czechoslovak settlement involving former Polish territory unless she was first consulted.

'Deal' Approved

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Sept. 19.—The British and French cabinets today ratified the partition of Czechoslovakia, and the annexation of the strategically important Sudeten Deutsche areas to the greater Germany, already swollen by the annexation of Austria.

All that remains to put the deal through and avert the threat of immediate war is the consent of Czechoslovakia itself. Both Britain and France were exerting tremendous pressure upon Prague today and they feel the Czechs will have no practical "realistic" alternative, but to surrender and give up a substantial part of Bohemia to purchase peace for the rest of Europe.

Prime Minister Chamberlain is making arrangements to fly back to Germany this week to inform Reichsfuehrer Hitler he can expand his Reich deeply into the ancient kingdom of Bohemia, without the necessity of going to war for what he wants. The second Hitler-Chamberlain meeting may take plwace Wednesday at Bad Godesberg on the Rhine. It was understood Chamberlain would fly to Hitler if Prague would make up its mind quickly to sacrifice part of its territory now and trust to Hitler not to grab any more later.

Fait Accompli Executed

The British are breathing much easier today now the deed has been done and the Czechs have been confronted with a diplomatic fait accompli executed by the Anglo-French statesmen at the bidding of the German dictator.

The Czechs were not consulted yesterday during the long deliberations at 10 Downing street between the heads of the French and British governments, and they were consulted today only to be advised that if they value peace and hope to save any part of their homeland they must consent to the dismemberment which has been inforsed by the "Big Four" of Europe—Britain, France, Germany and Italy.

War scares, which were so real and genuine for many weeks, are now receding into the background. The chief fear remaining is that the Czechs, angry and desperate at the desertion of their friends and allies, may plunge recklessly into war with the Nazis, on the theory that sooner or later France, Russia and Britain would be involved, and the local war would spread into a second world war, in which Germany would be defeated as in 1918.

Public Averse to War

If any such ideas are entertained in official Prague, the Anglo-French response would be to caution the Czechs against resorting to arms since the British public, and perhaps the French public, do not wish to fight for the sake of the Bohemian frontier, and the unassisted Czechs might find themselves well nigh exterminated in a "localized" war.

However, even though the Czechs are persuaded to yield the rich dis-

Cabinet Wavers

By Walter Kerr.
Special Cable to The Post.

Prague, Sept. 19. — A deeply shocked Czech cabinet, face to face with a British and French demand that it cede its frontier areas to Germany as the price for European peace, wavered tonight between acceptance and rejection.

It fully realized it was confronted with the most dangerous decision it would ever have to make—and firmly believed that whatever it decided the result would be the same: The end of Czechoslovakia as an independent state in the twentieth year of its existence.

President Eduard Benes took the chair when the cabinet convenede this evening at Hradchin Castle. He and every other man around the table felt that the country has been deserted in the critical hour by its allies. The proposal from London had fallen like a bombshell in the previous night, and for the first time the government saw the country alone, against Nazi Germany, instead of protected by its lalies, France and Soviet Russia and possibly Great Britain.

Only 3 Courses Open

The cabinet can see only three possible courses of action:

1. Postpone a decision. Try to make Great Britain and France reconsider. Hope that public opinion in those countries will force abandonment of the plan.

2. Accept in principle and pray for help around a conference table.

3.Reject the proposal as inacceptable—and go down fighting alone if necessary. In this connection it is of interest that there was a blackout in Prague at 7:30 o'clock tonight, the first air raid precaution that has been taken here in many months.

[After a nearly 12-hour session of the Cabinet ministers, a source often regarded as a spokesman for the Czechoslovak foreign office declared the Franco-British proposals were unacceptable to the Prague government the Associated Press reported.

Still Hope For French Aid

[This source said a glimmer or two of hope was seen by the Czechs who earlier had almost despaired of outside aid. It was indicated that the assistance of the Czechs' French allies had not entirely disappeared in the excitement of British Prime Minister Chamberlain's efforts to produce a settlement.

[The spokesman said two new developments threw a little sunlight

Morgenthau Won't Punish Magruder

Says Baltimore Aide Had His Approval in Backing Lewis Against Tydings

By James D. Secrest.

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday exonerated M. Hampton Magruder, internal revenue collector at Baltimore, of any wrong doing in the Tydings-Lewis Senatorial campaign as demands for recounts beclouded the bitterly contested Democratic gubernatorial and Baltimore Congressional primary results.

The Secretary of the Treasury informed the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee that Magruder had his full approval when he read a statement supporting Representative Lewis to a group of non-civil service employes under his jurisdiction.

The committee had referred the matter to Morgenthau after finding that the internal revenue collector had violated the spirit of the civil service act. Senator Tydings had filed the complaint against Magruder.

Morgenthau Refuses Action

Secretary Morgenthau advised Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, that Magruder's superiors not only had approved the statement he made in behalf of the senatorial candidate backed by President Roosevelt, but "the use he made of it as well."

"In response to your request for a statement as to what action I intend to take in this matter," he said, "please be advised that I am unable to discover any reason for any further action on my part."

Senator Sheppard said that Morgenthau's reply had not changed his opinion that Magruder's act constituted a violation of the law.

Meanwhile, in Baltimore Representative Palmisano, chairman of the House District Committee, demanded a recount of all votes in the Third Congressional District before his ravl, Tommy d'Alesandro, was declared the victor by 58 votes. According to an official canvass completed late last night. The final official vote was: d'Alesandro, 12,971; Palmisano, 12,913.

Palmisano Upset

The upset in Palmisano's calculations of Sunday, when he predicted that he would win by 57 votes, came in the Eighteenth Ward, which was tabulated late yesterday. Instead of carrying it by nine votes, as he expected, Palmisano lost it by 56.

His demand for a recount came after d'Alesandro had made a similar demand Saturday. D'Alesandro, however, indicated he would withdraw his demand if his present estimate proves correct.

The two congressional candidates have see-sawed in the primary returns since the unofficial count started last Monday night. Until the official tabulation began, d'Alesandro claimed a victory by 48 votes.

The recent, it was said, probably will delay final results for four or five days because of increasing demands for recounts in close Maryland counties in the gubernatorial tug-of-war.

Four Counties Involved

With Mayor Howard W. Jackson and Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor juggling for enough second-choice votes to assure nomination at the convention September 28, recounts were underway last night in four counties.

O'Conor forces had asked for recounts in three of the counties in which Jackson led. They are Frederick, Allegany and Anne Arundel.

Jackson aides instigated the recount in Queen Anne's County, where O'Conor was ahead. An investigation of reports of vote-buying also was underway.

The recount in Frederick County was the latest to be ordered. It will not begin before Thursday, according to G. Hunter Bowers, president of the board of election supervisors. Jackson carried the county by a margin of 238 votes.

While the retabulation began in the Allegany courthouse at Cumberland before a packed crowd of O'Conor and Jackson supporters, it was said that the outcome may not be known for five or six days. Jackson's first-count lead was 54 votes.

Checking Machine Reecords

If the recount gives the county's seven votes to O'Conor, the young attorney general will be able to clinch the nomination, it appeared yesterday, without the aid of the seven votes from Prince Georges County. The latter votes will be controlled by Lansdale G. Sasscer, fourth gubernatorial candidate, as the majority of second-choice votes were marked William Gordy, jr., who was a poor third in the race.

The suit filed by O'Conor's aides in Anne Arundel County alleged irregularities in the counting of votes in all of the county's 48 polling places, which Jackson carried 6,418 to 4,988.

The number of demands for recounts has astonished many Maryland voters who believed that the automatic balloting machines, used for the first time in the recent primary, would forestall such customary political maneuvers.

As there are no written ballots, the recount consists merely of a check of figures recorded by the voting machines against figures reported by the election judges.

Fiancee Balks Youth's Attempt To Sell His Eye

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—It looked today as if Johnny Carlson, jr., 19, would keep both of his eyes, after all.

Prompted by romance, he offered to sell one to M. O. Warner, blind storekeeper, of Richlands, Va. He wanted to get money to set himself up in business so he could marry Dorothy Anderson, 16, a high school student.

Dorothy, however, didn't like the idea. "Foolish!" she said.

John's mother, Mrs. Beda Carlson, put her foot down.

"I won't stand for it!" she said. "I wouldn't take $1,000,000 for one of his eyes."

John had been willing to sell his left eye, but not his right. His price was "not less than $5,000," he said.

Loft Stock Price Doubles in Day

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Common stock of Loft, Inc., more than doubled in value today, gaining a net of $2.50 a share in price in the New York Stock Exchange over the Saturday close. Today's finish was at $4.50 a share. At one time during the day the shares sold as high as $5.12.

Week-end news from Wilmington, Del., that the company had been granted by a court there the right to impress a trust of 91 per cent of the shares of Pepsi-Cola Co., held in the name of Grace Co., and of Charles G. Guth, former president of Loft, was responsible for the rise. The decision is subject to appeal.

During the day Walter S. Mack, jr., president of Phoenix Securities Corporation, announced that his company had taken up an option to buy 300,000 shares of Loft at $1.50 a share (25,000 of this amount had previously been purchased) and an additional 100,000 shares at $2 a share.

Cities Service Weighs Refunding Plan

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Cities Service Co. is considering the refunding of $16,903,000 first mortgage pipeline 5½ per cent series of Cities Service Gas Co. as the next step in its refinancing plan to reduced fixed charges, it was reported in Wall Street banking circles today.

Cities Service Gas is a subsidiary of Empire Gas & Fuel Co., of Delaware, which in turn is a subsidiary of Cities Service Co. Last month $36,000,000 of low coupon refunding bonds were marketed for Toledo Edison Co. to provide for retirement of $27,000,000 first mortgage 5s and $7,500,000 of notes.

Reich Steel Output Falls Below Allies

Situation Reversed From World War Days When Central Powers Led in Production

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 19.—A reversal of steel producing strength between the Central Powers and the Allies of Europe, from World War days to the present, places the latter group far above Germany and its allies, Steel Magazine says today.

Austria-Hungary and Germany could muster a total of 15,651,161 tons production in 1915, while the United Kingdom, Russia and France totaled but 13,684,632 tons. Today the same group of Central Powers can account for 20,815,722 tons, while United Kingdom, Russia and France are able to produce 38,239,590 tons.

While Germany has increased her annual steel output 50 per cent since 1915, Russia has had an increase of 333 per cent. United Kingdom has increased her production about 51 per cent and France 613 per cent.

A portion of Germany's production has been made possible by a trade agreement with France, whereby Germany has imported about 7,200,000 tons of ore annually in exchange for much needed coke.

On government advice and because it is felt desirable that the key men of the iron and steel industry remain at home until conditions become more settled, the British Iron and Steel Institute and British Institute of Metals have postponed their tour of the United States and Canada. The first contingent of British industrialists was scheduled to sail on September 17.

Management Experts Cheer Czechs' Stand

have been greatly encouraged and inspired by recent addresses of your President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, which have been interpreted as indicating a broad expansion of the Monroe Doctrine.

"But we are not asking help from anybody. All we need is a good word."

Asked if Great Britain and France would change the Czech boundaries, he snapped: "They can change anything, including their minds." But his face grew more somber as he was pressed regarding the apparent Franco-British agreement to let Sudeten areas of his country pass into Reichschancellor Hitler's hands, and he said slowly:

"One of man's great virtues is apparent when he is not afraid of anything in fighting to preserve his ideals.

"Unfortunately, it seems that only the Czechs have the will to pursue their ideals."

He then made some rather disparaging references about the caution that accompanies negotiations of aged diplomats, but when asked directly if he referred to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, he withdrew his remarks with a wry smile.

January 1 Fixed For Setting New Air Mail Rates

The Civil Aeronautics Authority yesterday fixed January 1 as the tentative deadline for revamping the present method of determining air-mail routes.

At the same time it was announced that G. Grant Mason, Authority member, and Denis Mulligan, consulting counsel in international aviation to the Authority, who are now attending the Fourth International Conference on Private Air Law at Brussels, Belgium, will make a survey of European civil aeronautics before their return to the United States.

Commenting on the prospective system of awarding air-mail contracts, Harllee Branch, former Second Assistant Postmaster General and now a member of the Authority, declared "No one should be deluded with the idea that all an airline will have to do to be given generous sums from the Government treasury is to convince the Authority that it has succeeded in operating at a deficit."

The agency already has started scientific rate-making studies which will form the basis for new contracts.

7 D.C. Officers At Opening of Traffic School

2 Park Policemen Also Attend as Sergt. Brubaker Stresses Preventing Accidents

By Howard F. Wentworth.

With seven Washington police officers enrolled, the University of Maryland Traffic Officers' Training School opened yesterday, offering two weeks of instruction in modern methods of lowering the highway casualty toll.

Following this intensive course, Washington's representatives at the school will launch new attacks on the local problem, applying scientific tactics to curb accidents and prevent needless injuries and killings.

District traffic conditions have already shown improvement under recent, city-wide educational and enforcement programs and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, said future accident control activities would be handled by his specially trained men.

S. S. Steinberg Is Head

The traffic school was opened yesterday by S. S. Steinberg, dean of the university college of engineering, and will continue under the direction of Clarence O. Forrester, commander of the accident investigation division, Baltimore Police Department.

The first session was devoted to discussions of major highway problems and how they should be handled by traffic officers.

Sergt. Marlin D. Brubaker, director of the accident prevetion bureau, Maryland State Police, said policemen assigned to traffic duty have two principal functions—to relieve congestion and keep traffic moving and to prevent accidents.

Stresses Prevention

The accident prevention angle is paramount, he told the "students," and rather than investigate accidents after they occur, the policeman's first duty is to prevent the occurence, Brubaker declared.

By intensive control work throughout the State, Maryland has reduced accident fatalities 34 per cent over last year, he said. He warned the officers that they must be as familiar with traffic regulations as the motorists and should be prepared at all times to grasp any given situation and take command.

He stressed courtesy on the part of policemen in dealing with the public, explaining that only by this method will the motorist respond with willing co-operation.

Accidents Avoidable

"And co-operation from the motoring public is perhaps the most important weapon in this battle," Brubaker added.

"There is no such thing as an unavoidable accident," he said. "Careful study of an accident by trained investigators will always reveal a cause and that cause can be remedied by proper, scientific planning," he said.

In addition to the Metropolitan policemen attending the school, two memberso f the United States park police enrolled. They are Lieut. H. Helms and Private E. S. Mast.

The Metropolitan men are Capt. Oscar Letterman, Lieut. Floyd Truscott, Lieut. L. R. Beall, Lieut. Clarence Talley, Sergt. M. R. Gore, Sergt. B. C. Beach and Private L. A. Hartnett.

The school is sponsored jointly by the college of engineering and the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Brookhart Weighs Senate Nomination on Progressive Ticket in Iowa

By the Associated Press.

Smith W. Brookhart, former Republican Senator from Iowa, said yesterday he was considering running for the Senate in Iowa this fall on the Progressive ticket.

BROOKHART.

At the same time, Senator Herring (Democrat) of Iowa was predicting the La Follette Progressive movement would make little headway in the tall corn State.

Brookhart said his running "has been put up to me," and that if he runs he will advocate the McAdoo-Eicher farm program which was defeated in the last Congress.

"The general feeling among farmers," he said, "is that (Secretary) Wallace's farm plan is a failure—not as bad as Hoover's farm board but still a failure."

He called Wallace's plan of buying farm surpluses for export "only a mosquito bite on the farm problem."

Herring said that "Iowa is not a third-party State," and added the fact that the Farmer-Labor Party already had a ticket in Iowa would further hurt the Progressives' cause.

"Iowans don't like to throw away their votes" he said.

Washington State C. I. O. convention voted yesterday to urge President Roosevelt to seek re-election for a third term.

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee ordered a further investigation yesterday of a letter mailed to Pennsylvania Democrats in August over the purported signature of Senator Guffey asking contributions to the Democratic State campaign committee.

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, said a committee investigator had interviewed Guffey, who previously had denied, through his secretary, any knowledge of the letter.

The committee, in a statement on August 16, said that the letter "if sent to any Federal employe involves a violation of section 208 of the United States criminal code." This section forbids solicitation of campaign funds from Federal employes by another Federal employe.

The Expenditures Committee also announced its investigators had reported by long-distance telephone they had found no grounds to support charges Wisconsin WPA workers had been solicited for campaign funds in behalf of Senator Duffy (Democrat), of Wisconsin.

The charges were filed by William H. Stafford who is seeking the Republican senatorial nomination in today's primary.

Cottage City 2 to 1 For New Town Hall

By a vote of 102 to 53, residents of Cottage City, Md., decided last night to float a bond issue to meet the community's share of the cost of a new municipal building and firehouse. Approximately $9,000 is expected to be contributed by a PWA grant.

Total cost of the project, which includes purchase of a new fire engine, is expected to be about $27,000. As planned, the building will be a two-story brick structure with an auditorium, offices for town officials and space for the fire department.

PWA to Take No Fund Pleas After Sept. 30

Has 5,000 Applications More Than It Can Fill Already, Though Only 699 Building

Deluged with 5,000 more applications than it has funds to supply, the Public Works Administration said yesterday that no further requests for loans and grants under the 1938 PWA program will be received after this month.

A total of $815,000,000 already has been allotted from the $965,000,000 available for PWA's share in the recovery program, and the agency is in a position, "any day now" to halt allotments, an official said.

Despite the large volume of allocations, only a few millions have been actually disbursed by the Treasury and only 699 projects, or 12 percent of the program, is now under construction. Congress specified that all applications be in by September 30, and the entire program be under construction by January 1.

Officials said applications for PWA loans and grants still are coming in at the rate of 10 a day and a last-minute flood is anticipated. Of 8,683 "new program applications received, for projects to cost $2,412,046,306, it was estimated more than 5,000 will be left unsatisfield. Allocations have been approved on 5,495 projects, 1,800 of which were hold-over from former programs.

PWA spokesmen predicted construction will reach its peak in the spring and ultimately will release total contract awards of about $1,867,000,000.

Some allocations will continue to be made after the application date closes. Secretary Ickes has warned that "undue delays" in construction will bring further rescinding orders on some projects already approved, and this money will be alloted to other projects.

U. S. Farm Station Asked for Virginia

Rep. A. Willis Robertson said today he hoped that one of four proposed Federal agricultural laboratories would be located in Virginia.

Businessmen of 17 Nations Told 'Unwise Taxation' Stifles Trade and Kills Private Initiative

U. S. Industrialist Says Government Owes Aid to Stabilize Financial Conditions

By Sidney Olson.

Government, instead of weakening business by "unwise taxation," should assist management to maintain a sound financial condition, A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of Westinghouse Electric Co., told 1,700 delegates from 17 countries at the second general session of the Seventh International Management Congress here yesterday.

Robertson, in a hard-hitting, bluntly spoken address, frequently punctuated with applause, struck repeatedly at Government restrictions as tending to stifle business initiative and thus to destroy private enterprise.

He said: "Here lies the great threat of Government against management. Government is the great enemy of initiative. Its chief duty is to make rules and regulations, and every rule is a curb on freedom, while danger lies in making everything and everyone conform to a type."

Hull Argues for Trade

Earlier Secretary of State Hull, in a welcome address read by George Messersmith, Assistant Secretary, had outlined American policy as one aimed at steady reduction of world trade barriers in order to remove "pressure leading toward military action."

This, he indicated, would make "unnecessary the enormous burdens placed on the world by armament and the monstrous threat to the world of military action."

Secretary Hull's greeting touched off the five-day session, to be devoted to intensive technical conferences on phases of management, administration, production, distribution, personnel, agriculture, home management and general management. Each phase will be studied at five group sessions.

Talks on Labor Tonight

Besides these technical sessions, delegates will attend as a whole ten general sessions, where major addresses will cover the entire field of management's history, future, responsibilities, technical progress and contributions toward more stable international economy.

Attention today centered on the session this evening, when three significant addresses on the topic of "A Common Ground for Labor and Management" will be made. C. S. Ching, public relations director, United States Rubber Products, Inc., of New York City, will preside. Robert J. Watt, American Workers' delegate to the International Labor Office, will discuss labor's aims and responsibilities; Lewis H. Brown, president, Johns-Manville Corporation of New York City, will discuss management's aims and responsibilities, and William Allen White, editor, the Emporia Gazette, Emporia, Kans., will speak on "The Public's Concern in Industrial Harmony."

Robertson's address, delivered in an informal manner that often brought chuckles from the audience, which included Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, was the major speech of the first day.

Excessive Pay Denied

In endeavoring to refute the charge that private enterprise makes excessive profits, Robertson said:

"It is obvious that great profits have at times resulted from private enterprise, but the average net earnings of 200 major companies in America during the past 17 years was less than 6 per cent on the investment."

He attempted to refute charges that management is paid too high salaries and bonuses, asserting that salaries of top management in the average company "are less than 1 per cent of the pay roll and who would not pay this much for good management?"

He emphasized management's "great responsibility" to furnish employment as regular and remunerative as possible, as he attacked the "scant heed" paid by management to the problem of furnishing yearly employment.

All general sessions are being held at the Chamber of Commerce Building.

Meat-Ax Death Held a Hazard Of Being a Cook

Being tapped on the head with a meat ax is one of the hazards of being cook in a restaurant, the District Court of Appeals declared yesterday in upholding an employe-compensation award to Mrs. Martha Jennings, 30, of 509 Second street northwest.

Mrs. Jennings' estranged husband, Franklin Jennings, reproved James Stedaman, 20, bus boy in a New York avenue restaurant over the way Steadman peeled potatoes and was killed in a brawl which followed. This was March 24, 1936.

The United States Employes Compensation Commission held that Jennings died in the course of his employment and ordered the employer, L. I. Robinson, to pay $4.78 weekly to the widow and $.37 weekly to her son Maurice, 11. The award was upheld yesterday.

Wallace Would Speed Crop Loans

Aides of Secretary Wallace said yesterday he favored speeding up the Administration's commodity loan program, especially for cotton and wheat.

Wallace, accompanied by Chairman Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Governor W. I. Myers, of the Farm Credit Administration, conferred during the day with President Roosevelt.

The secretary said "a credit problem" was discussed. Jones later said commodity loans were talked over.

Co-operative Head Predicts British Slump

Consumers' Society Leader, Here for Management Parley, Doubts War Peril

Depression appears inevitable for England regardless of whether there is peace or war in central Europe, Reginald G. Gosling, of London, director of the largest consumers' co-operative society in the world, declared here yesterday.

Gosling, director of the London Co-operative Society, which has a membership of 750,000 in England, said, however, he believes war will be averted.

"Chamberlain and his constituents have always been sympathetic toward the Fascist powers," he said.

In Washington as a delegate to the International Management Congress, Gosling reported a "growing unemployment situation" in England in an address at a luncheon given him by the Disrtict Co-operative League at the Lee House.

While trade in general throughout London showed a 0.4 per cent decline so far this year, trade conducted by the London Co-operative Society has increased 10.5 per cent, Gosling said.

He said war in central Europe probably would have little effect other than to partially block the impending depression.

Explaining his work, Gosling said supplies of all kinds—furniture, coal, food—were bought by the London Society for its member householders, cutting decidedly their cost of living. He said membership had been attracted from the low income group. The society did a business of 15,569 pounds sterling in the last 12 months, he said.

Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers of America, introduced Gosling. Walter Batley, a member of the London Society's management committee, spoke briefly. Approximately 75 members of the District Co-operative League, headed by Leroy A. Halbert, attended the luncheon.

South Warned Poll Tax May Cost Prestige

Michelet Points to Heavy Votes of North in Last Election as Basis for Convention Strength

A warning to Southern States that retaining poll taxes may cost them their strength and prestige in future Democratic national conventions is embodied in a statement issued by Simon Michelet, president of the National Get-Out-the-Vote Club.

Analyzing "the poll-tax revolt," in which President Roosevelt has intervened as an advocate of repeal of such laws over the resistance of old-line Southern Democratic leaders, Michelet remarked that "repeal of the ancient 'two-third rule' by the Democratic national convention, and the fear that the 1940 apportionment of delegates may be based on the votes of the respective States, puts the poll-tax group in a 'tough spot.'"

"The combined vote of the present seven poll-taxed States (revised by 1937 acts) for President Roosevelt in 1936," he pointed out, "was only 2,457,000, or less than 10 per cent of the President's 27,751,000. It is plain that, on this as the basis of representation in future Democratic national conventions, the so-called "Solid South" would quickly pass into partial eclipse as a power in the Democratic Party."

Points to Texas

He pointed out that Texas, where repeated moves against the poll-tax have been defeated—the most recent led by Governor-Designate W. Lee O'Daniel, who couldn't vote in the primary because of his refusal to pay the tax—had 3,220,880 citizens 21 years or older in 1930, but that even on popular amendments submitted to referenda only about 3.4 per cent of the maximum potential electorate cast ballots.

Recalling that the poll-tax group had declined from 11 States in 1920 to seven at present through withdrawal, first of North Carolina, then Louisiana, and last year, Florida and Arkansas, Michelet said:

"In the Presidential election of 1936, the poll-tax group included nine States—Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia. With a combined electorate of 12,472,245 citizens 21 years of age, these nine poll-taxed States in 1936 cast only 3,005,177 votes for all candidates for President and Vice President.

Only 24 Per Cent Voted

"They polled only 24 per cent of their potential electorate—the lowest voting record on the civilized globe—as compared with a 72 per cent vote as the average of 39 States free from poll-tax ban."

He observed that "popular revolts, supported by the State press, are now developing in these States—notably in Alabama, Tennessee, and Virginia."

"New York State alone in 1936 cast 3,293,000 votes for Roosevelt, or nearly a million votes more than the combined States of the poll-tax group," he pointed out.

"Illinois in 1936 polled 2,283,000 votes for Roosevelt, or as large a Democratic vote as the seven remaining poll-tax States after the revolt of Arkansas and Florida.

Pennsylvania Cited

"With the vote polled in 1936 as the basis for party representation, even the former 'rock-ribbed Republican' State of Pennsylvania, which gave the President a popular vote of 2,353,788, would count for more in Democratic councils, than all of the present poll-taxed South.

"In the census of 1930, Virginia had 1,300,893 citizens of voting age against 900,987 in West Virginia, which has no poll tax. In 1936, Virginia polled only 334,590 Presidential votes as compared with 829,945 for West Virginia. In other words, poll-taxed Virginia admitted only 25.7 per cent of its potential electorate to vote, while West Virginia, poll-tax free, led the States in polling over 90 per cent of its electorate."

Group Health Head Lauds New A. M. A. Program

William C. Kirkpatrick, president of Group Health Association, cooperative medical organization whose establishment here has been bitterly fought by the District Medical Society, last night hailed the new liberal program adopted Saturday by the American Medical Association, but asked for an even more progressive policy.

The A. M. A. convention urged extension of public health facilities, indorsed hospital service insurance, agreed that health of needy should be protected with aid of Federal funds, and asked creation of a Federal department of health. "We are glad to see," said Fitzpatrick, "that the American Medical Association is gradually catching up with what the public has long demanded.

"We hope the association will continue in its attempts to meet the demands the public is making. We feel there is much yet to be done on the part of the American Medical Association in getting into line with movements for more adequate medical care for low income groups such as is furnished by Group Health Association.

District Medical Society leaders could not be reached for comment.

Collector Hungry—No Frogs for Zoo

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Dr. Raymond Ditmars, the celebrated curator of reptiles at the Bronx Zoo, returned from the tropics today slyly looking like a man who had eaten a leptodactylus fallax in gastronomical ecstacy—and confessing zoological malfeasance.

When customs men wanted to know what happened to the 12 golden-hued frogs Ditmars' expedition took aboard ship from the Island of Trinidad, the scientist admitted that one frog got a dislocated neck or something and was prepared for dinner.

Ditmars tussled with his conscience and finally decided, well, six frogs would be enough for the zoo, so five more went into the pot. A day or so later he got to thinking about the delicacy of frogs legs, and you can guess what happened to the last of the leptodactylus fallaxes.

Businessman Aids Marines, Almost Loses His Yacht

Fire Island, N. Y., Sept. 19 (AP).—When the United States Marines are ordered to land and get the situation, etc., F. Goldsmith, of Baldwin, Long Island, a wealthy businessman, becomes a fighting man, and he proved it today by nearly losing his $10,000 cabin cruiser.

Goldsmith started out in his 48-foot cruiser from Freeport with his crew of three and 15 marines aboard in a demonstration. But the "battle" orders had been outlined for clear weather and Goldsmith saw his marines could not go overboard in the seas running between his cruiser and the beach.

He shouted: "Hold tight, everybody!" and shoved his throttle to "full speed." The cruiser fairly leaped out of the water, straight up to the beach. The marines piled out and raced ashore, but it was two hours before the Coast Guard rescued Goldsmith, his crew, and the disabled cruiser.

Wolfe was buried in his family's plot, near the grave of O. Henry, the short-story writer. Many persons mentioned by Wolfe in his first novel, "Look Homeward, Angel," were among the hundreds of friends and admirers who attended the services.

Legion Roars For Arms and Neutraity

Senator Walsh Calls for Stopping Trade With Any and All Belligerents

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 19. — The men who helped to win the World War 20 years ago only to find out later that it did not prove to be a "war to end all wars," roared today for a powerful armed peace and neutrality that will keep the United States out of war.

The twentieth annual convention of the American Legion, its greatest gathering, had for a keynoter Senator Walsh of Massachusetts. He talked of neutrality, national defense and communism.

He gave the legionnaires a command. It was: "the command is forward—forward, not for world democracy, but for peace and democracy at home here in America." Senator Walsh said:

"I urge a policy of unquestioned and affirmative neutrality.

Against "Meddling" Abroad

"We must strain every effort, employ every means of vigilance, exhause every alternative short of mischievous meddling to prevent another world conflict. But, even more important, we must protect our country from becoming entangled in the mesh of international rivalry and conspiracy which inevitably leads to war.

"There is no doubt in my mind—and I am sure all who are mindful of the World War will agree—that the American people will never tolerate an involvement in any war to settle European troubles, to salvage foreign holdings of our own 'follow the flag' dollar diplomats and capitalistic groups.

"American neutrality must be real and genuine, fearlessly asserted and meticulously enforced, if we are to avoid international bad will and possible complications likely to lead to war.

"In my opinion the only course that will actually assure our peace if we are to remain truly neutral, in fact, is to suspend all trade and commerce with all belligerents in time of war. Such a course may occasion some economic loss, but it will be unmistakable evidence of our neutrality.

"We must not be content until we have an American Navy of such size that it may single-handed be a match at sea against any foreign power or combination of powers.

"We have enemies within our gates, enemies that are challenging our basic ideals secretly and stealthily, striving in devious ways to undermine them, and whose ultimate aim is to overthrow our system of organized economic and social activity . . .

"Enemies Within Own Gates"

"You must gird yourselves now against the subtle enemies within our gates. We seek not to suppress the right on any man or woman to think and speak freely. But we exert our utmost influence against the apostles of foreign philosophies, alien to American ideals, who would, if they had their way, topple our most precious institutions about us and erect on the ruins the superstructive of destructive authoritarian government."

National Commander Daniel J. Doherty reported that today there are 972,933 members of the Legion. He pointed to the Legion's American commission activities as "of greater import now than at any time in the history of the Legion."

Mrs. Malcolm Douglas, of Seattle, national president of the women's auxiliary, reported that 465,000 women members are backing the Legion's goal for preservation of America's peace.

V. F. W. Demands Jobs or Pensions For All Veterans

A program including jobs for all employable veterans and pensions for all the unemployables with war service was presented to President Roosevelt yesterday on behalf of the Veterans of Foreign Wars by Eugene I. Van Antwerp, new commander in chief.

A letter left with the President calls also for adequate care for those with service disabilities, social security benefits for all crippled and dependent children and for all unemployable citizens over 50 years of age, and pensions for dependents of dead veterans.

The V. F. W. program calls, as well, for drastically reduced immigration quotas, deportation of criminal and undesirable aliens, registration and fingerprinting of all aliens and an effective national defense through "actual neutrality. Government control of munitions and taxing the profit out of war."

Sudetens Face U. S. Blacklist On Trade if They Join Reich

Like Austrians, They Would Lose Benefits of Hull Agreement; Pact With Czechoslovakia Probably Would Be Revised

By the Associated Press.

The United States, experts said yesterday, will place on her economic blacklist any Sudeten territory handed over to Germany by Czechoslovakia.

They added that the present trade agreement between the United States and Czechoslovakia, which went into effect April 15, probably would have to be revised if Czechoslovakia were partitioned.

Czech trade with the United States totaled $37,897,000 in the first seven months of this year. The nation sold us $21,658,000 worth of goods and bought $16,239,000 worth.

The Sudetenland, upon being transferred to Germany, would go on America's blacklist in the same manner that Austria was placed on it shortly after being absorbed by Germany. Since Germany does not accord American goods most-favored nation treatment, the tariff concessions granted by the United States to other nations under the trade agreements are not extended to Germany.

Experts believed immigration quotas for both Germany and Czechoslovakia would have to be modified. Germany's quota probably would be increased, which would permit more German refugees to come to the United States.

A considerable volume of Czech exports to the United States come from the Sudetenland, which is the industrial section of Czechoslovakia.

French Nation 'Humiliated' By Hitler Deal

French

to her treaty of alliance with Czechoslovakia, had received Stefan Osusky, the former Chicago lawyer who is the Czech minister in Paris, and told him of France's change of front.

Osusky made no attempt to conceal his emotion when he left the Quai D'Orsay, and with tears streaming down his face told newspapermen "they have condemned my country without hearing it."

In Czech diplomatic circles in Paris what hurt particularly was the fact Britain and France had consulted Hitler, who had made no concessions at all, and had completely ignored the Prague government, which had made repeated concessions, and which, after all, was the only thoroughly loyal ally remaining to France in eastern Europe.

Blum Sees "Warning"

As Leon Blum wrote in the Socialist paper Le Populaire today, "in all these transactions there is someone whom we have not seen appear, someone who nevertheless is the principal interested party—namely the Czech government. The right of self-determination which the Fuehrer has recalled to the western powers with such haughtiness does not go for the Sudetens alone. There is something which is not supportable, even from two big states today toward a small one, and that is that an attempt be made to dispose of Czechoslovakia without consulting her. This thought is also a warning."

The French government was frankly startled by the revulsion of feeling which recalled the popular protest against the Hoare-Laval plan for carving up Ethiopia. Whereas last week deputies were being deluged with please for peace and warning against the country being dragged into war, today the country was angrily denouncing what is generally regarded as a dangerous capitulation to Hitler, which augurs ill for the future of France.

Nevertheless it is generally admitted in France that application of the Chamberlain-Hitler plan means the end of the French system of alliances in eastern Europe. Probably the Franco-Soviet military alliance will soon fall into abeyance, even if i tis not formally dissolved, for it must be obvious to the Soviet government, that if France will not fulfill her treaty obligations to fight for Czechoslovakia, she will not come to the aid of Soviet Russia.

Ally Lost Writer Notes

The consequences to France of the loss of Czechoslovakia as an ally were summed up tonight by Henri de Kerillis, in L'Epoque, which reflects the views of the French general staff.

The noted Nationalist deputy points out that France will lose the support of 500,000 well-trained troops in central Europe if Czechoslovakia is neutralized (the French general staff has been organizing the Czech army for the past 20 years); that France will lose its only aerial base from which it can bomb Berlin and Vienna; that the Third Reich will be swollen by the addition of 3,000,00 new citizens and will occupy the fortified mountain range of Bohemia, which commands the wheat fields of Hungary and the oil wells of Rumania.

Furthermore, by the proposed deal, while France will be bound to come to Czechoslovakia's aid, France herself can no longer count on Czech assistance when she herself is invaded by Germany.

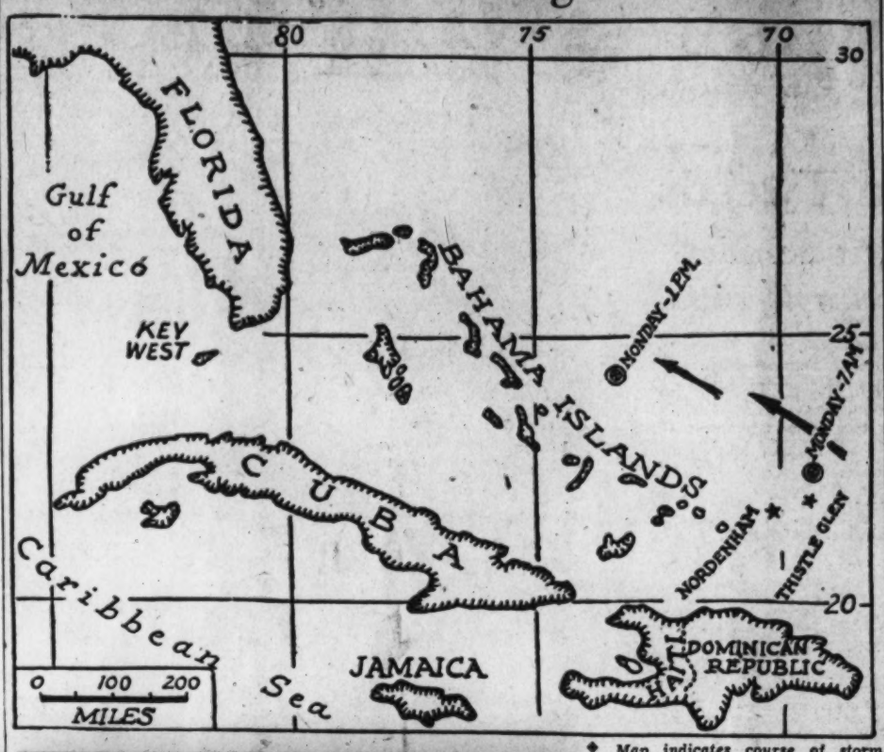
$100,000,000 in Bills Sold by Treasury

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau announced last night the Treasury had sold $100,000,000 worth of 91-day Treasury bills at an average price of 99.973, equivalent to borrowing at .106 per cent.

The rate was fractionally nigher than last week's .103 per cent cost of short-term money. Last week's rate was twice as high as in preceding weeks, but the increase followed an $800,000,000 borrowing operation on long-term securities.

Path of Hurricane Moving on Florida



Map indicates course of storm which threatened Florida coast, where resort cities have been boarding up window fronts and taking precautions. Marks, assistant meteorologist, were busy preparing maps charting direction of hurricane now veering north

Hurricane's Approach Detected Here

Weather Bureau Experts Chart Its Course by Comparing Data From Ships in Path

At 12:20 p. m. Saturday the Dutch motorship Socrates radioed from 500 miles north northeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico, that it had encountered high swells, winds of 40 miles an hour, and a falling barometer which read 29.76 inches.

The Weather Bureau here received the message and immediately relayed it to the special hurricane weather station at Jacksonville, on the east coast of Florida.

That was the first hint that a tropical hurricane was in progress. Confirmation of the report came at 7 p. m. that night when the S. S. Gretavale, nearer San Juan, reported 50-mile winds and a falling barometer reading 29.27 inches.

These messages set the Weather Bureau here in motion to disseminate information to agencies in Washington and along the tastern coast that a most destructive type of storm was headed for Florida.

After 7 a. m. yesterday, when the S. S. Nordenham reported a barometer reading of 29.24 inches and 80 mile winds and the S. S. Thistle Glen reported torrential rains and high confused seas from its estimated position of 20 miles south of the storm center, the Red Cross and Coast Guard swung into action.

From its southern region headquarters the Coast Guard dispatched trucks equipped with radio to strategic positions along the Florida coast. These will be used to keep communications open if telegraph and telephone lines are blown down.

The Washington headquarters dispatched five of its disaster relief officials to Miami. These included Robert E. Bondy, director, and his assistants, George Myer, Maurice R. Reddy, Harold Foy and Miss Roberta Morgan.

Exact location of the hurricane was not known until yesterday. Approximate location of the center could be guessed reasonably well, however, because distant ships reported intensity and direction of the winds and barometer readings. Since winds swirl counter clockwise around centers of hurricanes, forecasters put their backs to the wind and held out their left hands, which pointed in direction of the stom.

'Birth of Baby' Film Is Termed 'Decent'

Richmond, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—Judge Julian Gunn decided today in City Circuit Court that the motion picture, "The Birth of a Baby," was neither obscene nor indecent and held that a license for its showing in Virginia should be issued by the State Board of Motion Picture Censors.

The motion picture, an educational film produced under the auspices of the American committee of Maternal Welfare, Inc., was denied a permit by a unanimous vote of the board several weeks ago. An appeal was taken to the Richmond court.

Virginia Guernsey Sets Milking Record

Blacksburg, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—Annabelle, prominent daughter of an elite bovine family, has taken the milk production championship of the Guernsey breed in the South to a Fredericksburg dairy farm.

Records for a total of 1,095 milkings, supervised by Virginia Tech experts, made Annabelle the Virginia champion and ranks her tenth in the United States in the AA class. The figures giving her the new ratings were 18,213.4 pounds of milk and 921.4 pounds of butterfat.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—A Rockingham County delegation conferred today with Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley relative to completion of highway work under way and some new projects which W. Clyde Koontz, chairman of the board of supervisors, said were badly needed.

Shirley promised to present their requests to the highway commission at its next meeting.

into the otherwise gloomy situation:

...[A majority of the cabinet stood firmly against Hitler's purported suggestion that all cities which gave the Sudenten German Party, now outlawed, a 70 per cent or more plurality in the last municipal elections be handed over automatically to the Reich.

[The French cabinet was understood here to be exercising no pressure on Czechoslovakia to accept the French-British program.

[Earlier, the United Press said in a dispatch from Geneva that Russia had informed Czechoslovakia she will not come to her aid in a war against Germany unless France does likewise.

Russia Awaits French Action

[The Soviet attitude was described as in strict accord with terms of the Russo-Czech treaty, which makes entrance by the Soviets into a war in which Czechoslovakia is involved conditional upon previous intervention by France under terms of the French-Czech alliance.

[The United Press informant said that Soviet Commissar Maxim Litvinov will address the assembly of the League of Nations on Wednesday and may outline Russia's position toward the general European situation at that time.

["All our allies have left us in the lurch," the Czech delegate to the League said.

[Persons close to Czech President Benes, however, believed Moscow would give Czechoslovakia a measure of "unofficial" support if the Czechs decide to fight to prevent application of Hitler's demands for virtual partition of their republic.

Support to be "Informal"

[This aid would consist of bombing planes, technical assistance, and other measures similar to the informal support Russia has given the Spanish loyalists and the Chinese fighting against Japan.—Editor's note.]

There were many factors guiding the government tonight, and the most important was public opinion in this country. The Czechs and Slovaks are in an agry mood. It was difficult to speculate tonight as to what the ultimate decision would be, but most informed persons thought the cabinet would agree to discuss the proposal with the British and the French—that is, take the No. 1 course of action and stall for time. Some persons thought the cabinet would take the No. 2 course and accept in principle. Only a few thought it wold take the No. 3 course and fight.

Diplomats Kept Busy

The diplomatic activity here today has been terrific. The ministers of every country represented in Prague called at the foreign office for information, and most of them went away empty-handed. The government simply did not know what it could or would do. The cabinet met most of the day, sometimes with Premier Milan Hodza and sometimes with President Benes presiding. At 5 o'clock the premier made a report to the standing committee of Parliament and leaders of political parties supporting the government. His report was broadcast over the radio at 7:15 o'clock tonight.

"The results of the conference of the British and French governments are now the subject of diplomatic negotiations. The decisions of the two governments will be announced as soon as they have been formulated in a detailed way. The Czech government is considering the problem with all the earnestness that the present situation demands.

"As I told you yesterday, all the elements of the government and all constitutional authorities are unified in their attitude and will remain so I declared before the committee which represents our whole people that the government will do all it can to serve the vital interests of the people and protect the state from harm.

Night Session Begun

And then the cabinet went into its night session. As the evening wore on the rumors became more frequent that it was deciding the country could not fight alone and that the whole policy of the government up to last night would have to be revised.

Meanwhile, the mobilization of the army continued and it will continue at least until a final decision is reached.

The Czech people were more horrified than shocked by the London proposals. Their first reaction was that of anger and defiance but, as the day woreon, it changed to resentment and frustration.

While everyone was talking of the new proposal and waiting beside radios for the government's decision, everything was being done to keep the people calm. As early as 11 o'clock this morning—before the newspapers had publishing anything—the government radio station was stressing the need for steady nerves.

"Be Calm," Is Radio Plea

"The London proposals should not be taken as the final word," the station announced. "Be calm. Have confidence in the government. The cabinet will be informed of the details. It is now meeting with the president, be calm.

But these appeals did little good. The people were to excited to pay much attention to them—particularly those crowds that gathered before newspaper offices waiting for further news.

Men who yesterday and before had said their government would fight alone if necessary, were saying: "What's the use?"

Foreign observers here said there was a possibility the very extremes of the London proposal might lead to its acceptance here. They pointed out the Czech people might decide if such a plan came from friends, they probably should seek new ones.

Russia Officially Silent

Moscow, Sept. 19 (AP).—The attitude of Soviet Russia, a big question mark in the Czechoslovak crisis, remained an official secret tonight.

Under terms of the Soviet-Czechslovak treaty of alliance, Russia is pledged to aid Czechoslovakia if she is invaded and if France gives aid first. An important question tonight was what Russia will do if Czechoslovakia is invaded and France fails to help.

The Soviet government has given no indication and Czechoslovak circles here show no expectation that Moscow will act in such a case. They feel confident Russia will aid Czechoslovakia if France does.

FOLO SUB CZECH—

Some Soviet circles contended developments of the week-end, in which France and Britain were reported to have agreed on a plan to dismember Czechoslovakia to appease Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany, proved what the Soviet press has been saying for some time—namely that British policy consistently has been to reach an agreement with Hitler at Czechoslovakia's expense.

may prove a new and more serious crisis.

Streamer headlines in the German press include: "New Declarations of Der Fuehrer," "Maintenance of the Czech State Structure is Impossible—Blood Guilt of Prague Increases." The Voelkischer Beobachter, "A Moscow Murder Detachment Equipped with Poison Gas and Explosives, Ready for Massacre."

Other headlines read: "Terror in Sudetenland Continues Undiminished," "Czechs Train Poison Gas Detachment for Civil War," "Czech Murder and Torture Germans Under Bloody Regime," "Sudeten Germans Carried Off as Hostages—Women and Children in the Hands of Mob."

Four Powers Would Share

Taken together, information reaching here from Rome, Budapest and Warsaw indicates a four-power plan for partition of Czechoslovakia under which three nations—Germany, Hungary and Poland—would share the spoils. Just what would be the disposition of the remainder of Czechoslovakia, in such an event, is not clear.

Thorough partition of Czechoslovakia was the theme of editorials in Nazi newspapers today.

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said: "In these decisive weeks, Prague must be shown that it is entertaining false hopes, and that a divorcing of all its nationality groups will be carried out, simply in order to avoid a European war. The Prague state of 1919 . . . must disappear, one way or another."

Charges "Bolshevism"

The Nachtaugsgabe said: "This Bolshevik pest must be burned out immediately."

The Berliner Tageblatt declared: "Czechoslovakia has become a cancer of Europe which must be cut out immediately, or the whole organism will be poisoned."

The Lokal Anzeiger said: "There is no way of saving peace other than tearing the incendiaries away from the powder they have collected."

A nation-wide radio hookup carried to Germany tonight the incendiary speeches made at the meeting in Dresden, Saxony, tonight, by Sudeten-German refugees from Czechoslovakia.

British and French Cabinets Ratify Deal To Give Hitler Big Slice of Bohemia

London

tricts of Sudetenland, there is another way in which the Hitler-Chamberlain-Daladier peace plan may be upset.

The party of the fourth part, Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy, insists Prague must not only satisfy the Sudeten German minority, but must placate the Polish and Hungarian minorities, presumably by transferring their sections of Czechoslovakia to Poland and Hungary. It is one thing for Czechoslovakia to concede territory to an overwhelmingly powerful Germany; it would be something quite different to cow before a weak Hungary, which alone could never menace Prague.

Of course, if Hitler supports Hungary's claim, Budapest might get somewhere with the German army and air force behind it.

Cabinet Approves Plan

The British cabinet was in session for two hours this morning and gave general approval to the plan to buy peace at the expense of the Czechs. The technical details of redrawing the frontier to nearly everybody's satisfaction are yet to be worked out.

This afternoon Chamberlain and his foreign secretary, Lord Halifax, conferred for more than an hour with Maj. Clement Richard Attlee, parliamentary leader of the Labor Party, and his deputy, Arthur Greenwood. Chamberlain next saw the leader of the Liberal Party, Sir Archibald Sinclair, while Lord Halifax returned to the foreign office to receive Winston Churchill, who constitutes a party himself, although nominally attached to the government's side.

The American, French and Italian ambassadors visited Downing street during the day to hear the decision of thecabinet. The preferred envoy was the American Ambassador, Joseph P. Kennedy, who got to see Chamberlain for three-quarters of an hour, while the French and Italian envoys were received across the street at the foreign office. It is assumed Count Dino Grandi, echoing Mussolini's speech, reminded Lord Halifax that Czechoslovakia must be cut up all around to give slices to Poland and Hungary as well as Germany.

Cadogan Sees King

Lord Ronciman, who served for weeks as British Mediator in Prague, only to discover what everybody suspected, that Hitler would discard mediation for his own brand of dictation, lunched with the Prime Minister and afterwards saw Lord Halifax.

King George returned from Windsor to Buckingham Palace and gave audience to Sir Alexander Cadogan, under secretary to Lord Halifax.

As a precaution against Communist demonstrators and their chant of "Down With Chamberlain," there were scores of police on duty in Downing street tonight. The police almost outnumbered the sightseers who stayed away on the assumption, perhaps, that there is to be no war for the present.

After the four-hour meeting of the council today, it was decided to consult with foregn trade union movements. Views will be sought from the French Socialist Party, the French trade unions and the International Federation of Trade Unions.

At the closing of the Communist party congress at Birmingham today Harry Pollitt, secretary of the party, referred to the Anglo-French agreement as an "open incitement to Hitler to march on Czechoslovakia."

He added: "Those who are capitulating to fascism instead of adopting a common peace policy that can restrain fascism are as fully helping to make bombs for dropping on London as those whose bombs already fall on women and children in Barcelona."

Plans Details Revealed

Despite Chamberlain's sealed-lips injunction, the details of his peace plan are gradually leaking out. The three main points of the plan are understood to be as follows:

Sudetenland to be annexed to Germany without a plebiscite, the new boundaries to be drafted under the control of an international commission. The United States may be invited to send impartial observers.

Independence of the emasculated Czechoslovakia to be guaranteed by Germany, Italy, Great Britain, France, Russia, Poland, Hungary and Rumania under a pact similar to the Locarno treaty, which Hitler tore up when he marched troops into the Rhineland and "rescued" its Rhenish minority from a state of non-militarization.

Czechoslovakia to renounce her military alliances with France and Russia. Prague will be neutralized after the manner of Belgium and Switzerland.

Last Election May Be Key

Exactly how much territory Hitler is to acquire remains to be worked out, but one suggestion is he should have all areas with a majority of Sudeten German residents and that the cantonal system should be set up to provide local autonomy in the hinterland areas, where Sudetens are numerous, but less than a majority of the population. To avoid persecutions and feuds, arrangements may be made for the interchange of Czech and German populations to and from the areas which go to Hitler so that the new Czechoslovakia will be more homogeneous than the Versailles model which is cracking up.

Since Hitler does not care to waste time over a plebiscite when he is determined to annex Sudetenland regardless, a census may be necessary to ascertain in just which areas there are a majority of Sudetens. In lieu of a long and costly census, it is suggested that all areas which in last summer's municipal elections cast a majority of votes to the Henlein party should be considered to have voted for the Anschluss with Germany.

Meanwhile, Downing-street refuses to release much information about what is going on. One London paper complained today that, although the crisis affects the lives of millions, the controlled German press has more information about the Berchtesgaden conversation than "the free press of Great Britain."

The War Department yesterday announced assignment of Brig. Gen. Kenyon A. Joyce to command of the First Cavalry Division, Fort Bliss, Tex., effective next month. Morgenthau to Confer With Chinese Bankers

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced yesterday that a delegation of Chinese financiers would call on him today.

Informed persons expected them to discuss the working of an agreement under which the Treasury buys more than $10,000,000 worth of Chinese silver per month. These purchases give the Chinese dollar credits with which they can buy supplies in this country. It was understood that T. V. Soong, China's leading financier, would be among Morgenthau's callers.

Campaign for funds to enlarge the Montgomery County General Hospital at Olney, Md., started yesterday with 11 women announced as district drive leaders. The fund drive will continue for two weeks.

Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, of Bethesda, chairman of the gifts committee, announced appointment of the following district chairmen: Kenwood, Mrs. Thomas Summerville; Westmoreland Hills, Mrs. George Wetherell; Battery Park, Mrs. A. B. Foster; Mrs. Fred Coe, Mrs. George Pariseau and Mrs. E. H. Hartnett; Glen Echo-Cabin John, Mrs. W. B. Armstrong; Somerset and Friendship Heights, Mrs. Louis Abbott; Silver Spring, Mrs. J. G. Pratt; Takoma Park, Mrs. Fred Pratt; East Chevy Chase, Mrs. George Winchester Stone.

Mrs. George P. Sacks will direct solicitations in the Bethesda business district. Other chairmen will be appointed by Harry Hoskinson, of Germantown, general chairman of the campaign.

Funds raised in the drive will be used to enlarge the maternity and accident wards, to add an additional men's ward and to construct a new heating plant. The hospital now has a capacity of 40 beds and more than half of its patients are charity cases.

Installation of officers of Cissel-Saxon Post, No. 41, American Legion, was held last night at the Liquor Control Board Building in Silver Spring. Carl R. YYeagle, vice commander of the Southern Maryland District, conducted the ceremonies.

Officers installed were G. A. Hood, commander; William Small, first vice commander; Capt. Frank L. Hewitt, second vice commander; Frank Proctor, third vice commander; David Mears, adjutant; Ernest Daymude, sergeant-at-arms; Charles J. Clifford, chaplain.

An additional 200 qual were liberated yesterday in Montgomery County by W. Carroll Waters, chief deputy game warden for the county. Approximately 200 were liberated Saturday and another 200 earlier. The game warden freed 150 pheasants Thursday but it is feared this will have little effect on the hunting of this species, as previous efforts to propogate pheasants in the county have failed.

Waters said the squirrel season opens October 1 and will close October 15 despite the fact that there are numerous squirrels this year. The short season was inaugurated last year when squirrel were scarce. Dove season is now in progress and will close September 30. The season on quail will open November 15.

F. S. Spidel, 7802 Radnor road, Bradley Hills, was fined $2 and costs yesterday by Judge Harold C. Smith on charges of violation of a county ordinance prohibiting permitting fowls to run at large. The complaining witness was his next door neighbor, Arthur E. Miller, retired naval officer, who said Spidel's chickens came through a tunnel under the fence to dig in his garden. Spidel said the tunnel was dug by Miller's dog when it came after his chickens.

Czech Chemist Says Nation Will Protect Its Citizens

DR. AND MRS. JAROMIL SLADEK.

Even School Children Prepared for War With Air Raid Drills Common as Fire Drills in U. S., Declares Expert Teaching Here

Czechoslovakia does not desire war but the country has taken precautionary measures to protect its citizens in event it should come, according to Dr. Jaromil Sladek, Sc. D., M. S. Ph., of Charles University, Prague.

Dr. Sladek and his wife are in Washington for a short visit. He served in the World War.

Every man in Czechoslovakia has two years of military training and then goes into the reserve. The large factories of the country could, in many cases, be transformed into munitions works almost overnight, the visitors pointed out.

Months ago all residents of cities and villages who could afford it were ordered to provide themselves with gas masks. Persons who employed servants were obliged to provide masks for them. The poor received them at expense of the state.

Air Raid Drills Common

Air raid drills are held ever so often just as are fire drills in schools here.

Demonstrations have been held at 6 o'clock in the mornings when factory workers crowd the streets and when children are on their way to school. Sirens shriek and streets are cleared within a few minutes.

If war should come, Dr. Sladek, who has spent the summer at the Simpson Memorial Institute of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor conducting research in drugs used in the treatment of pernicious anemia, probably will serve in the army chemical division.

Both he and his wife, speaking of treatment of the Sudetan eGrmans, refuted statements that they had been mistreaed. They have schools of their own from nursery to college, in which only German is spoken; some of them do not even speak the Czech language although their names show they are of Czech origin. There has been, at least up to the present crisis, no discrimination against them intellectually, socially or in business.

Henlein Held Hitler's Tool

"As Czechs they have enough to eat and no food restrictions," said Mrs. Sladek. "If they become eGrmans, they will see the difference. Henlein, too, would find after Hitler had his way, that he was only being used as a tool."

Dr. Sladek contrasted the positions of the Sudeten Germans and Germans in the Tyrol under Italian rule. The latter are not permitted to use their own language or even their German names. Hitler has shown no concern for them.

Dr. Sladek is visiting chemical laboratories while he is in Washington and his wife is visiting educational institutions and the Children's Bureau. She studied at Columbia University from 1930 to 1932 on a fellowship.

Feeble-Minded School Held Overcrowded

Is Admitting Only the Worst Cases, Says Dr. Lewald, Its Superintendent

Only the most urgent cases are being admitted to the District Training School for Feeble-Minded because of overcrowded conditions, it was pointed out in a report yesterday to the Board of Public Welfare.

Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the school at Laurel, Md., author of the report, presented a 12-point program to ease the crowding.

His primary request is for more personnel. There now are 98 employes and 559 inmates.

"This causes an extreme shortage of personnel and the necessity of having the employes work long hours, as we must maintain 24-hour supervision for the entire 365 days," he reported.

Dr. Lewald states one employe is needed for each five inmates, on a two-shift system. Construction of a new hospital for the plant will only reduce the overcrowding in part, he said.

Need at Least 22 More

A total of 120 employes will be needed when the new hospital is completed, and should an eight-hour day, which has been frequently mentioned in the past few years, be put in effect, 45 more employes would be needed, he stated.

Frank B. Haskell, superintendent of the Home for Aged and Infirm, also requested a larger appropriation to meet demands of the increased population at his institution. At present there are 867 persons there, as compared with a daily average last September of 593.

In addition to an increase of personnel, Dr. Lewald has requested a new building for inmates, an industrial school building with shops, classrooms, auditorium and gymnasium; an additional boiler in the power plant; additional employes' residence space; a milk house and milking barn; storage for vegetables and work space for gardeners; laundry building and equipment; a deep well, extension of water mains and water treatment plant; a sewage disposal plant; a garage for District owned cars; adequate entrances and general beautification.

Dr. Lewald at present is also acting superintendent of the National Training School for Girls. During the absence of the medical officer of the Training School at Laurel, the superntendent had to not only carry his own duties but be responsible for the actual medical care of inmates and employes, he said.

Poles Demand Voice in Any Czech Accord

Warning Held Aimed at Getting Silesian Area Army Says They 'Must and Shall' Have

By the United Press.

Warsaw, Sept. 19.—The government has warned Europe's major powers that Poland refuses to recognize any Czechoslovak settlement involving former Polish territory unless Warsaw is consulted, it was announced officially tonight.

The announcement, obviously referring to a strip of Silesian soil and a Polish minority of 82,000 in Czechoslovakia, coincided with a manifesto of the Polish army's high command saying that "Tesin in Silesia shall and must again become Polish territory."

Cesky-Tesin, formerly a Polish town before creation of the Republic of Czechoslovakia 20 years ago, lies just across the frontier in the Czech province of Moravia.

Wild demonstrations and shouts of "March against the Czechs," broke out tonight in the Polish town of Katowice, 42 miles north of Cesky-Tesin, as the government rushed detachmentsof special troops up to the Czechoslovak border.

Simultaneously the government-controlled press vehemently demanded that the Polish minority in Czechoslovakia be turned over to Poland, along with the section of Silesia which formerly belonged to Poland.

The government announced in a communique that, because of a constant stream of refugees across the frontier into Poland, it had become necessary for the Polish high command to reinforce its border detachments with special troops.

Henlein's friends say he travels in disguise through the main streets after entering Czechoslovakia, but Czech officials say this is "ridiculously impossible."

The Sudeten leader's wife and children are in Germany. His home at Asch is under constant guard, as are all the former party offices throughout the Sudeten territory.

Refugees Hail "Revenge"

Dresden, Germany, Sept. 19.—Sudeten German refugees hailed with a thunder of "heils" tonight the declaration of one of their leaders that "the hour of revenge has come."

The cry came from Wilhelm Sebekowsky, propaganda chief for Konrad Henlein, fugitive leader of the outlawed Sudeten German party of Czechoslovakia, before a mass meeting of thousands of refugees.

Sebekowsky spoke after homage had been paid to "party comrades who fell for the liberation ideal."

"We did not flee our homeland to fold our hands into our laps idly, but we shall return victoriously," he said.

Then, referring to President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia, he shouted:

"Benes is nearing the end of his tether; he is afraid of Sudetens' self-determination and well he may be."

He accused "peace-makers" after the World War with forcing Germans, Slovaks, Hungarians, Ruthenians and Poles to submit to Czech rule.

He charged the Sudeten German region "has been turned into a battlefield; streets are mined; barricades are erected; people are being maimed."

Turning again to speak of Benes, he charged the Czecks' head and Joseph Stalin of Soviet Russia had agreed not to permit successful arrangements in the Czechoslovak-Sudeten German negotiations over the minority's autonomy demands.

"Benes," he cried, "you have lied your country to death."

Second Fiddle

When Mussolini spoke at Trieste last Sunday he spoke in a city which since Austria's absorption by Germany finds itself directly under the guns of the expanding Third Reich.

Before Anschluss, the Berlin-Rome axis had at least the appearance of a partnership between equals. The disappearance of the Austrian buffer between the totalitarian dictatorships weighted the scales heavily in Germany's favor. Mussolini has found it necessary to accept that fact and make the best of it.

For all of his blustering, of which the Trieste speech is a typical example, he is now cast in the role of a suppliant for Hitler's favor. By getting on the bandwagon in favor of the partition of Czechoslovakia, through a plebiscite in which all the minorities in that land would participate, he was playing his card on what he expected would prove the winning side. And in this particular his calculations appear to be borne out by events.

As a result of the decision reached by Great Britain and France, Italy is now in a position to claim credit for Hitler's resounding triumph. But it is a claim which not even his own people will take seriously. Personally Il Duce must find the part of Hitler's lieutenant distinctly unpleasant and distasteful. He has been crowded out of the limelight, now dominated by an erstwhile disciple and recent partner who is today the Fuehrer of Mussolini himself.

70 Per Cent Federal

The Treasury's study of tax-exempt securities supplements work already done by the Department of Justice on the question of eliminating these exemptions. In the one case finance experts have estimated the volume of securities bearing interest that cannot be taxed and the distribution of these securities among governmental agencies, corporations and individuals. The concern of the legal experts has been to devise ways and means of taxing income from all future Federal and State issues without a constitutional amendment.

It is difficult to draw any conclusions from the Treasury's findings, except that they do emphasize the seriousness of the problem. To permit interest from securities worth more than $65,000,000,000 to remain wholly or partially exempt from the income tax is both socially and economically undesirable. If Congress can deny such privileged status to future State as well as Federal bonds, there will be less favoritism in our tax system and a larger number of wealthy individuals will be inclined to shift their capital to productive enterprise.

Even though tax-exempt securities in the hands of the public yielded $1,554,000,000 in interest during 1937, the proposed reform may not be significant from the viewpoint of governmental revenue. It would apply only to future issues. That should mean a gradual increase in revenue from this source over a period of years, but this gain would probably be offset by higher interest rates on bonds subjected to taxation.

Nor can it be assumed that taxes on the interest from Government securities would bring an exceptionally high yield, because a considerable per cent of these bonds are owned by wealthy people whose income is subjected to high surtax rates. A large volume of partially exempted securities are already subjected to surtaxes. With exemptions gradually disappearing, moreover, a shift in the distribution and ownership of Government bonds could be expected.

So it is not the lure of revenue which justifies this reform, but the reasonable desire to even up the tax load and entice large capital holdings into productive enterprise. The real question is whether Administration experts or Congress can draft a bill that will afford sufficient protection to the States to pass the scrutiny of the Supreme Court.

Even if that effort should fail, however, Congress could go a long way toward solution of the problem by ending tax exemption for future Federal securities. More than 70 per cent of the tax-exempt securities now in private ownership have been issued by the Federal Government and its agencies. Less than 30 per cent are State and local obligations. And in recent years the Federal Government has been responsible for all of the rapid increase of bonds that cannot be taxed.

Tax-exemption, then, is largely a Federal problem. Congress could eliminate 70 per cent of the inequity resulting from this practice without raising any constitutional question whatever.

A Breathing Spell

Czechoslovakia, as it exists today, was a creation of the Treaty of Versailles. In curt and peremptory fashion Section VII of that document outlines the manner in which the new nation should be carved out and observes, in passing, that "German nationals habitually resident in any of the territories recognized as forming part of the Czechoslovak State will obtain Czechoslovak nationality ipso facto and lose their German nationality."

With the progressive destruction of other parts of this ill-fated treaty of peace it became very unlikely that Section VII would be permanently immune. With a resurgent German nationalism it was particularly unlikely that the enforcement of a hybrid nationality on the Sudeten Germans would last, unless one or both of two policies were followed. Either the Czechs had to make their new nationality very attractive to the proportionately huge German minority within their borders, or other nations had to evince willingness to fight a rearmed Reich in order to keep the Sudeten area in subjection.

Neither of these requirements has been fulfilled. As was clearly indicated in the municipal elections of last May and June a large majority of the Germans of Bohemia are irreconcilably opposed to remaining under Czech sovereignty. And as was demonstrated last week-end, neither Great Britain nor France is willing to fight to keep this German minority under the rule of what it regards as alien oppression.

Thus the current European crisis approaches the solution foreshadowed when Germany was allowed to rearm, to reoccupy the Rhineland, to annex Austria and in other respects to undermine the Treaty of Versailles. There was only one reason to suppose that the process of disintegration would leave Section VII of this treaty untouched. That was the belief that the French and British might precipitate another world war rather than see the borders of Czechoslovakia disturbed. The crisis of the past few weeks indicates how seriously this dreadful outcome was considered. For reasons which admit of no American criticism London and Paris have now decided to take no responsibility for such disaster.

Were the United States disposed to ally itself with the French and British the decision might easily have been otherwise.

This country, however, is clearly in no mood to undertake another crusade in behalf of democracy, regardless of the fact that an independent Czechoslovakia was first planned and promulgated over here. Neutrality legislation still on the statute books would apply equally to both sides should a European war be precipitated now. The Johnson Act would prohibit France and Great Britain from floating loans in this country. Less than a fortnight ago President Roosevelt emphasized that the United States is not engaged in any collective effort to "Stop Hitler." So criticism of the French and British for not being willing to fight had better come from non-American sources.

The British and French decision is the more natural because of the abundant evidence that neither of these nations is menaced by Hitler's push toward the East. His ultimate policy, in which the weakening of Czechoslovakia seems only a step, is clearly outlined in Mein Kampf, and so far has been consistently adhered to. Saying there that colonies offer no solution of Germany's problem Hitler added, writing in 1927, that this problem will be solved only by "the gain of territory for settlement which shall extend the area of the Fatherland itself, and thus not only keep the new settlers in close communion with the land of their origin, but guarantee to the combination all the advantages arising from the size of the united whole,"

It is toward Russia, of course, that the German Drang Nach Osten is fundamentally directed. Russia is really threatened by the imposition of German will on Czechoslovakia and Russia undoubtedly would welcome British, French, American or any other substantial aid in fighting Germany now. But the latent hostility between the German and Russian dictatorships is no concern of the western democracies, which lose no love on either of them. And those who recall how the Bolsheviks sold out at Brest Litovsk will see the less cause for breaking a quixotic lance in behalf of Stalin now.

That Russia will fight for Czechoslovakia without French and English assistance is very doubtful. There is a greater chance that the Czechs, rather than swallow the bitter pill prepared for them, may resist alone. Their military equipment is excellent and they are a very courageous people. But even if Czechoslovakia were united, the odds against her in opposing Germany unaided would be enormous. And as matters stand whole regiments of German, Magyar and Polish nationals would be inclined to mutiny rather than face Germany in behalf of their Czech overlords. In the World War no less than six Allied divisions were formed among the Czechs who surrendered in preference to fighting for Austria. The precedent is one which plagues the harassed officials in Prague today.

So the general situation, as indicated by yesterday's buoyant stock exchange, looks far more favorable for peace as a result of the Anglo-French decision to try and work co-operatively with Hitler. And apparently there will be an effort to extend this co-operation beyond the immediate problem to a general consideration of the danger spots in Central and Eastern Europe. With the present tacit admission that the Treaty of Versailles is ended such broad consideration is obviously imperative.

Another large-scale war in Europe would settle nothing constructively; could only bring that continent down in utter ruin. The way out now offered is subject to very serious doubt and entirely legitimate criticism. But it is at least infinitely preferable to a war in which France, Great Britain and Russia would oppose Germany, Italy and Japan. From the prospect of such a conflict all sane men shrink.

Face-Saving Consistency

With his "purge" batting average exactly .000, President Roosevelt has nonetheless gone to bat again. In a statement from the White House he gave his blessings to James H. Fay who is today contesting with John J. O.Connor, chairman of the House Rules Committee, for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Sixteenth New York District.

Now as heretofore the attempt to eliminate a "yes, but" member of Congress may meet with failure. But the very fact that this is known to the President, as well as to the Nation, gives his indorsement of Mr. Fay a character which his activities in Maryland and Georgia did not have. The would-be "purge" having proved so flat a failure, Mr. Roosevelt's intervention in the Sixteenth New York District now represents nothing more than the expression of the President's personal preference, which the voters are clearly under no obligation to follow.

In apparently sticking his neck out once more Mr. Roosevelt saves his face with respect to the whole "purge" business. This follow-up in spite of previous failure suggests that he is prepared to go down fighting for what he considers a principle.

In the meantime Mr. O'Connor's efforts to capitalize resentment at the President's intervention against him by securing the Republican as well as the Democratic nomination appears to be running up against a real obstacle. With the President already having been sufficiently repudiated at the polls for his efforts to secure a Congress of pliant tools, many Republicans in the Sixteenth District feel that their support belongs to Allen W. Dulles, a man who by character and training would be admirably fitted for the post he seeks.

Philological Opportunity

It would be wonderful if some bright young man would compile a really complete and authoritative dictionary of the language of swing music. Considering what had been accomplished with Sumerian and Chaldean, and what is being attempted with Mayan and Minoan, the job does not seem too formidable. Indeed, sporadic efforts to examine the swing language, philologically have already yielded some gratifying results.

A very helpful paper on the subject appeared in our Post Impressionist column, September 2. On the following day the British weekly, Cavalcade, published a fairly extensive, if not altogether trustworthy, translation of certain words. In consequence of such groundwork, several definitions may now be accepted as reasonably accurate. For example:

Doghouse—a bull fiddle or contra-bass.
Jam—to play swing music better when you're not being paid for it than when you are.
Jam session—amateur assemblage of professional musicians.
World—state of comparative emotional equilibrium; hence, to "send out of the world," i. e., to provoke by means of an unusual sequence of noises a temporary insanity in a listener.
Corney—pre-1938.

However, a comparison of the two monographs previously mentioned reveals certain disturbing discrepancies. What for instance is the word for the musical instrument which in English is called a clarinet. Our Impressionist says "licorice stick" but the English philologist makes it "agony pipe." Without any wish to disturb the friendly relations now existing between the two great democracies, we are inclined to suspect that "agony pipe" is a British neologism of the kind manufactured for purely domestic consumption.

It is disappointing that no light has yet been cast on the two most perplexing problems. We mean the significance of the words "upbeat" and "downbeat" and the difference, if any, between their meanings. On this point our Post Impressionist authority has confessed his defeat, implying that the secret is part of a cabala shared only by whackies of the ninety-seventh degree. The Englishman, we regret to say, has completely ignored the question.

Dogs And Playgrounds

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I read with great pleasure the letter in your paper called "In Defense Of Dogs" which certainly expressed my sentiments.

I had read Mrs. McIlwee's complaint against dogs being allowed in the playgrounds with children as they would destroy the beauty of the playground which should be decorated with plants and flowers. I wondered at the time why she thought children, or for that matter, grown people appreciated the beauty of nature so much.

I frequently drive through our beautiful zoo and notice the fearful disorder of newspapers, and remains of picnic lunches scattered over the lawns although trash cans are near at hand. I also walk my own dog through what would be a beautiful woodland nearby if it were not strewn with broken milk bottles and torn newspapers, certainly not the work of dogs.

What lover of nature has ever driven through our beautiful country and not been distressed by the scenery being marred by every possible advertisement. I think if it were up to children whether they would rather play with a happy tail-wagging puppy or look at some well kept shrubs they would chose what has always been called "The Friend of Man." L. Prayers For Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The call for united petition to the Most High God for peace made by Dr. Albert J. McCartney, chairman of the Committee of Religious Life in Washington, is a step in the right direction, and should be joined by all those who want peace. War must be prevented, and united prayers of all who want peace, will bring the answer. "When he calls I will answer, and while he is yet speaking I will hear."

No force of evil can stand against such power for good as the combined earnest and sincere prayer of God's people to Him for peace.

Why Not Emigration?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
If Hitler, believes the whole world is so naive as to think the Sudeten question is the sum of his intentions toward Prague, he truly is a madman. But why has not the world asked him to get his Sudetens, his German brothers in Czechoslovakia, out of Czechoslovakia into the great Reich where their minority rights and protection are guaranteed a la Hitler?

In other words, if those Sudetens are citizens of Czechoslovakia, owing allegiance to that national government, even though Germans by blood, their representations are to be made to the sovereign state centered at Prague. That government is the machinery of a sovereign state. As such it has the sole right to adjust its own internal affairs over all of its citizens.

On the other hand, if those Sudetens owe allegiance to Hitler's Reich, and are dissatisfied with living conditions, why don't they go over into Germany where Hitler says rights and liberties are to be found? Why doesn't he tell them to come home? Why should there be an externally enforced plebiscite on another sovereign state? Why should Czechoslovakia cede the Sudetenland to Hitler's Germany, because the Sudetens prefer Nazism to constitutional government?

The creation of that little state was by international law. Its boundaries fixed by law. Its peoples, its citizens, ostensibly by choice. If 3,500,000 of its citizens prefer to be regimented and Nazified what is holding them there in that state?

Why has not Lord Runciman proposed that they get out? What's so technical and difficult about the emigration of the Sudetens from Czechoslovakia?
HALCOTT N. BRADLEY.
Washington, Sept. 15.

Lippmann And The Crisis

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
What happened to Mr. Walter Lippmann? Has he gone pro-Chamberlain altogether? I never entirely shared his views as to the international situation. But, up to last Monday, until Hitler spoke his piece, he at least pretended to be for democracy. In his article in The Post, September 16, he takes the thesis from Hitler's speech, i. e., if the Czechoslovakia government can and will preserve peace and order within its borders without bloodshed then and only then will the democracies stand by ready to help the little republic. Adolph Hitler!

Hitler said precisely this very same thing Monday, that Czechoslovakia has no government, that it is nothing but a band of murderers and exploiters, that the supposed-to-be democracies are supposed to be for self-determination of minorities, but that it's all a lie and the only thing that is left to do is for him, Hitler, to step in and really determine the rights of his brethren, the Sudeten Germans.

We in America, while not directly affected by the Czechoslovakia situation, are very vitally interested that democracy continues to prevail wherever it exists today, and we certainly do expect our writers of national repute not to lullaby us into a stupor, but to wake the human and democratic spirit in us. Mr. Lippmann certainly is 100 per cent Chamberlain ideology. While Chamberlain tries to show that he does everything possible to preserve peace, I think that it could have been done much more simply and with less prestige for Hitler. A plain, firm declaration that Great Britain will not stand by looking on if Hitler's Fascist legions will march hope, new courage into all the peo- again as they did in the case of Austria, would have instilled new ple in the democratic and also in the Fascist countries.
SAMUEL SHINBERG.

The Purge

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
President Roosevelt, in his attempted purge, evidently believed he knew the pulse of the people and that the States would succumbs to his wishes and elect men whose minds are patterned after his own. On the contrary, the invasion clearly revealed that patriotic citizens will do their own thinking (and voting) and rightly resent suggestions from the White House.

A philosopher once wrote: "Opinions evolve out of passions; indolence of intellect allows those to congeal into convictions." That mental indifference, regarding politics, has been stirred by the purge one can hardly doubt. It may well prove a blessing in disguise, inasmuch as people, as a whole, will take a renewed interest in national affairs and in future refuse to be driven, like sheep, to the ballot box.

Sporting Offer

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The mountains are the natural boundaries of Czechoslovakia as fixed by the League of Nations.

If the Germans in Czechoslovakia want to be under the rule of their fellow Germans let them move to Germany, and I will gladly pay my proportional share of the expense, rather than have another world War. ECONOMIC JUSTICE.

Third Term Prospects

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Numerous correspondents have given their opinions in this column on the so-called Presidential purge, and your editorial of September 16 sums it up as "an unwarranted encroachment by the President upon the people's right to choose their own representatives." This generalized statement can only be accepted in a modified sense because the method of choosing candidates for public office never falls to the individual; therefore, the electorate is enabled to vote for the representatives indorsed by State and local politicians.

As will be remembered, in his last radio appeal to the country, Mr. Roosevelt stressed the fact that he did not intend to go into any State in the capacity of President, but as the head of the Democratic Party. Although much was made of this subtle distinction, in retrospect it would appear that the voters could not differentiate between the dual role Mr. Roosevelt attempted, perhaps unwisely, to play. For them he remained the President.

The inference is drawn that the Democratic electorate strongly resented such tactics, but well greased party machinery was depended upon for the results.

Many editors loudly condemned Mr. Roosevelt for sponsoring particular candidates in the primaries, but I think he and the Nation now understand each other better; for this experiment by the Executive, as you point out, teaches a valuable lesson. President Wilson's campaign on behalf of the League of Nations was a quasi precedent for President Roosevelt to fall back upon, yet the arrows aimed at unifying party organization were deflected.

Bound up with the foregoing experiences, as time grows shorter, it would be of paramount importance to prognosticate whether or not Franklin D. Roosevelt should have a third term. In order to fuse the work already initiated under the New Deal into a completely integrated whole, signs are not wanting to indicate that a third term may become an economic necessity.

Although domestic matters, especially in the politico-social field, will shape Mr. Roosevelt's decision to run or not, the foreign situation will be a factor of immediate concern also. Supposing that a European war breaks out within the year, it would probably not terminate prior to the elections of 1940—if that in Spain is a good criterion. The passive or active part which, in such an event, the United States may play cannot but have a tremendous effect on the temper of the voters with regard to a third term. Again the Wilsonian comparison comes to mind.

Undercurrents would seem to portend that "the people" are not going to cast aside their greatest advocate in the White House since Abraham Lincoln for the sake of unwritten precedent. Despite the mistakes he has made, if the major issues arising between now and the next Democratic National Convention are of a character to warrant continuing the present Administration in office, Mr. Roosevelt will run regardless of the outcome.

The Post Impressionist

School Begins

THE OPENING DAY of school is not crimson-splashed on the calendar; it is not singled out creators of almanacs or calendars.

But it is a day that has never been known to creep on one unawares; it is never overlooked and forgotten. More eyes are trained on this date than on any that rates a red letter. More feet are set marching by the arrival of it than by war drums.

I was one who always looked forward to school with trepidation. But as the days rolled forward like an inexorable Juggernaut I was caught in the surge and landed, almost before I could get my breath, at the schoolroom door.

Because our town was a mere speck on even the most complete State map, one building sufficed for all grades, including the lordly high school students. One man served as principal of this conglomerate assemblage and though he was able and unceasingly diligent in his efforts to have us seek knowledge, his heart was elsewhere.

His spirit's true haunt was the fleeting realm of song, his soul flowed in unison with melodic forces of the spheres and his lips more often gave utterance to trills and warbled rondelays than to conjugations of Latin verbs or to laying open the lair of the unknown quantity.

The first school day was an event that he seized on with ardor as if it were the last flickering light in a darkened world, fanning its feeble flame into an occasion with his music book, blowing it into a blaze with songs, choruses, and many choice solos by himself.

The assembly hall was a huge room capable of swallowing the entire student body at a gulp. There we gathered on the first day, each grade grouped in alotted spaces all neatly labeled like seeded beds.

A high ledge or platform held two pianos. It was here that the Professor gained Olympian heights, marching back and forth across the boards, beating time and leading us in singing, as united in effort if not in harmony, we plodded through a song.

The solos were impromptu and spontaneous. One never knew whom the Professor might single out and beckon to the platform.

My one bid to fame was a pertly worded song which I piped with abandon and appropriate gestures before visitors in my home, and on one occasion in public when a Sunday school class met for entertainment. But like all artists, I wanted to widen my field. Then the cynosure of all the room, I would bustle to the platform, wait for the opening chord and then burst into song.

But the Professor's roving eye had never come to rest on me. Others, seated right and left, had felt its benificent ray and had passed up the steps to their small glory.

This year's opening had been auspicious. Picked choruses swung through rollicing numbers, vocalists had had their moment. There were duets and quartets on the pianos, playing in concerted beats with much crossing over of hands and treading of pedals.

Sandwiched between the music was a thin slice of dramatic art—a sop to the expression teacher, and during these recitations the Professor sat impatiently in the background, for it was plain he considered it a waste of time.

Hardly had the last dulcet word fallen from the speaker's lips, than the Professor was on his feet. No general scanning the battle was more intent than he; his eye was unerring. Blindly it swept past me, where bulging with song I perched on the edge of my seat, and came to rest on my sister who sat just ahead with her class.

She tripped up the steps, seated herself at the instrument and opened the book on the rack. The Professor fluttered the leaves, ready to enchant us with spellbinding airs. Presently they broke into a sprightly English folk-song; this was followed by "O Strephon, O Strephon, Go Dance With Young Katrine," and while the reluctant swain was being importuned, I wondered if my chance would come.

But the Professor was singing on and on; he was now vigorously entreating, "Oh, Ho Ye! Oh, Ho Ye! And Who's For the Ferry?" It was obvious he was in the midst of an English cycle that would presently re-echo throughout the school. The last term had closed in a spray of lilting Neopolitan boat songs, the Professor going from room to room warbling airily with the rest of us chiming in a few strokes off-key.

Then as the Professor and my sister were stepping with esprit through the mazes of a Maypole dance, the school clock struck. The singer heard and gave heed; he glared ominously out over our defenseless heads; it was just like a clock to intrude at the most unpropitious time. My glare matched the Professor's.

But even he was a slave of time. He closed his book, my sister rejoined her class and we were dismissed.

We marched out one behind the other like a long serpent uncoiling and sliding from a limb. The Professor was still on the platform, his music clasped in his hands.

I had a fellow feeling for him, as feet pounded to classrooms. He was brooding because he had been snatched from the heights: I, because I had never gained them.

Tough On Extremists

I HAVE CLIPPINGS of two news dispatches of the same date, taken from a left-wing newspaper, reporting similar incidents in New Jersey.

One tells with obvious pleasure of the disruption of a Nazi meeting in Elizabeth. The other relates with a note of indignation the mobbing of a radical orator at a meeting in Hoboken.

The Elizabeth dispatch says: "The moral of this story is, if you're going to hold Nazi meetings in Elizabeth, do it quietly. Twenty-five members of the German-American Volksbund came to this decision last night, after 500 anti-Nazis took over, broke up and otherwise manhandled a scheduled Bund meeting at Eintracht Hall. Only 25 Bund sympathizers came, but the anti-Nazis, showing real interest, sent a small army. Pickets blocked the entrance, others took over the speakers' platform inside the hall. The meeting was over before it began."

THE HOBOKEN STORY reports that Herman Matson, critic of Mayor Bernard McFeely and his Democratic city administration, was mobbed and beaten when he attempted to hold a meeting in Hudson Square Park on the Hoboken waterfront and was arrested on a charge of inciting to riot. Matson's wife, who is expecting a baby, also is said to have been punched and kicked as she attempted to reach her husband on the platform. Morris Milgram, State secretary of the Workers' Defense League, which appears to have been the sponsor of the meeting, charged that members of the International Longshoremen's Association of the A. F. of L., and "hired gangsters" were responsible for the riot.

In the Elizabeth disturbance a police captain rescued the chairman of the Nazi meeting before injury could be done him. In Hoboken the police apparently held back until Matson and his wife had been hurt and then arrested Matson.

THE TWO INCIDENTS were identical in the respect that speakers were silenced by mob action, yet one disturbance was class-angled in the newspaper dispatch and made to seem a trivial and satisfactory happening. In the one case the police were alert enough to protect the person of the orator of the evening but failed to maintain his constitutional rights to speak and that of his adherents peacefully to assemble. This is the same constitutional right, however, for which such clamorous demand has been raised in the disturbed area of New Jersey by left-wing organizations when left-wing meetings have been suppressed.

I yield to no man in my loathing for the Nazi disease in Europe or here, but I put my finger on this parallel as an unguarded admission of my contention raised last fall at the time of the agitation by the Civil Liberties Union in Jersey City that the radicals do not cherish civil liberties as such. Vile as their conduct and purposes are, the Nazis and Fascists of foreign birth and hyphenated sympathies are no more contemptuous of equal enjoyment of civil liberties than the radicals.

• • • •

IT WAS A JOKE to mob the Nazis, block the entrance, take over the speakers' platform inside the hall and manhandle a scheduled meeting, one gathers from the quiet humor of the lead sentence, "The moral of this story is, if you're going to hold Nazi meetings in Elizabeth do it quietly." But the same interference with the constitutional rights of speech and assembly is serious when the victims represent the radical point of view.

And the moral of this story, to borrow the opening phrase of the good-humored dispatch about the mobbing in Elizabeth, is that the constitutional rights of speech and sembly have no friends at the extremity of either wing, but will be maintained, if at all, only by those who dwell in the middle and curse both wings with equal fervor and patriotism.

Davey's Charges Utterly Baseless, Pension Head Says

By the Associated Press.

Chairman A. J. Altmeyer, of the Social Security Board, asserted yesterday charges made by Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio, against the board were "utterly without foundation."

Davey had charged among other things that C. I. O. membership was required of board employes and that the chairman gave choice positions to untrained, personal friends.

The board is considering suspensions of grants to 110,000 Ohio old age pensioners, claiming the system was not administered in accordance with Federal requirements.

Pennsylvania Bridge Start Is Delayed

Work on the $2,000,000 Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, scheduled to begin today, has been postponed until October 3, it developed yesterday. Delay in delivery of material caused the postponement, District officials stated.

The Penker Construction Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio, which was awarded the contract to build the span, already has set up offices near the bridge which will span the Anacostia River. Massachusetts pink granite will be used in the construction.

George Washington U. Names 3 Lecturers

Smith, who will give courses in classification, reference and bibliography; Adelaide Hasse, bibliographer of the Public Works Administration, who will give the course in public documents, and Belknap Severance, head cataloger of the United States Patent Office, who will teach cataloging.

Quebec Nationalism

By James Frederick Green

Will French Canada Go Fascist?

(Mr. Green is one of the research associates of the Foreign Policy Association. The following analysis of the political situation in the Province of Quebec after two years of power by the Duplessis government is excerpted from "Canada's Political Problems," published in the current issue of Foreign Policy Reports.—Ed.)

THE FRENCH-CANADIANS, now composing 30 per cent of the population of the Dominion, and increasing at a high birth rate, have sought for generations to maintain their ethnic and cultural integrity in the Province of Quebec and in other provinces where they have emigrated. By insisting on a federal rather than a unified state at the time of confederation, and by upholding provincial rights for the past 70 years, they have kept Quebec the "New France" of North America. Their determination to continue as a separate community, using the French language and the Napoleonic code of law, creates an element of disunity — particularly serious in time of war or depression—unknown in the United States.

The effort of the French-Canadians to defend their cultural integrity is fostered by the Catholic Church, which receives the allegiance of 40 per cent of the Dominion inhabitants and virtually the entire population of Quebec. In few communities of the world has the church so complete an influence over every aspect of human life, including marriage, education and social organization, as well as a large portion of economic and political activities.

It is frequently charged that the Quebec hierachy, having been unaffected by the liberalizing forces of the French Revolution in Europe and the freer social environment elsewhere in North America, is excessively conservative and favorable to the growth of fascism. The church replies that it merely desires to defend the province as a religious entity against heretical tendencies in both modern France and the English-speaking world, and to preserve the best qualities of the older peasant and artisan society by creating within Quebec the type of Christian corporative state envisaged in the Papal encyclical. Quadragesimo Anno.

• • • •

THE RECENT GROWTH of political tension has been caused largely by the changing economy of the province. Until the twentieth century the economic and social life of Quebec rested on a genuine peasant class, unique in North America. The past 30 years has seen a steady proces of industrialization which has undermined this agrarian society. Slums and disease have developed with little restraint or remedy by municipal or federal authorities. Wage scales are the lowest in Canada, and even farm income compares unfavorably with that of Ontario.

The economic difficulties of Quebec are due in part to certain basic inequalities in the industrial system and to the educational policies of the Catholic Church. The rapid growth of urban factories employing unskilled labor has often led to low wages and poor conditions, not commensurate with the profits of the industry.

The fact that English-Canadian or American capital controls the major industries and communications of Quebec causes the French-Canadians to regard themselves as "hewers of wood and drawers of water" on their own territory. They resent their exclusion not only from the profits of their labor, but also from the higher ranks of business and civil service, in Quebec and elsewhere in Canada.

Dissatisfaction over economic conditions in Quebec has led in recent years to the emergence of a nationalist spirit and increased insistence on provincial rights. The revival of a separatist movement, the anti-foreign and anti-Communist policies of the Duplessis government, and the appearance of a Fascist party are all manifestations of French-Canadian resentment at the inferior position of the province.

QUEBEC'S NEW NATIONALISM has been advanced by M. Maurice Duplessis, whose coalition party—the Union Nationale—overthrew in 1936 the liberal government which had been in power for 40 consecutive years. M. Duplessis attacked the "foreign" financial and business interests, promising to restore "Quebec for the Quebecois" through reform of monopolies and public utilities. The premier has not yet redeemed these campaign pledges, and has thus avoided any break with the large business interests, which approve his labor and antiradical policies.

It is the apparent intention of the Duplessis government gradually to inaugurate the corporative state favored by the Catholic Church, the first steps being enlargement of existing labor legislation. Under the workmen's wages act of 1937, a collective bargaining contract signed in one establishment can be extended by government order throughout a whole trade and industry, and a joint committee of employers and employes within an industry form a corporation to oversee wages and conditions of apprenticeship.

The fair wages act of 1937 established a government board to investigate working conditions and institute codes of hours and wages. Under an order of December 23, 1937, the board issued minimum wage and hour rules affecting nearly 80 per cent of Quebec's 670,000 workers. The Duplessis government has favored the Catholic syndicates over the international unions, but has secured the enactment of several measures opposed by both groups of organized workers.

THE MOST SPECTACULAR project of the Duplessis government has been the padlock law, a measure passed unanimously by the Quebec legislature in March, 1937. The attorney general of the province is authorized to seal and padlock for one year any building used "to propagate communism or bolshevism by any means whatsoever," the owner being allowed to prove his innocence in court, but without appeal. Any person printing, publishing or distributing any literature "propagating or tending to propagate communism or bolshevism" is liable to imprisonment from 3 to 12 months and costs. The police are empowered by the attorney general to seize and destroy such literature without judicial warrant or review. No definition of communism or bolshevism is provided in the statute, so that its administration rests with the attorney general, at present the prime minister.

Since November 9, 1937, when the padlock law was first enforced, Quebec police have been active in raiding homes and offices, seizing printed material, and suppressing liberal and radical activities. The Duplessis government justifies its action as necessary to defend the province against alien and subversive movements, epecially as the Dominion Parliament in 1936 repealed section 98 of the criminal code, a wartime measure under which Communists were imprisoned and their meetings prohibited. Political and religious leaders in Quebec maintain that the traditional qualities of French Canada are being undermined by irresponsible agitators, who are jeopardizing efforts to ameliorate poverty and distress along constructive lines. Opponents of the padlock law, mobilized throughout the Dominion by the Canadian Civil Leberties Union, regard it as a violation of historic civil rights and the first step toward destruction of Canadian democracy.

The Dominion cabinet refused on July 7 to disallow the Quebec law, following the recommendation of the minister of justice, M. Ernest Lapointe, that the question be decided in the courts on some concrete case. The possibility of a decisive test in the courts arose in July, when for the first time a private home was closed by seals and padlocks, which were later broken by the tenant. Defeat of the law in the courts would probably diminish the prestige of Premier Duplessis, whose popularity has declined in recent months, owing to failure of his highway construction program.

• • • •

ENFORCEMENT OF the padlock law in Quebec and anti-union campaigns in Ontario have given rise to frequent charges that a Fascist movement is emerging in Canada. A Fascist party has been in existence in Quebec for over a year, led by M. Adrian Arcand, editor of L'Illustration, semiofficial newspaper of the Duplessis government. In July, 1938, a National Unity party was organized at Toronto, combining Arcand's National Social Christian party in Quebec and the Canadian Nationalist party of Ontario and Manitoba.

The Role Perilous

By Robert C. Albright

Peace-Maker's Lot Uncertain One

Senator Borah, of Idaho, last night warned of "propaganda" efforts to involve the United States in the Czechoslovak crisis and sharply criticized proposals that President Roosevelt intercede.

He called apparent Anglo-French consent to turning the Sudeten area over to Germany "extraordinary" but said it "is not our affair."

Borah said former Premier Blum of France, who proposed the President intervene in the interest of peace, should "give his attention to the fact that France has a solemn treaty with Czechoslovakia to come to her rescue."

"The people of this country may now look forward to a deluge of propaganda seeking to involve the United States in these controversies and all in the name of peace," he said. "They call it peace to get us in. But after we get in, it is war!"

• • • •

Borah's statement was released at the Capitol as the President conferred on the foreign situation with State Department officials and reviewed the status of the neutrality act with Chairman Sam McReynolds of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

McReynolds denied amendments to the act were discussed, and said he saw no reason for changing the law. He declined to say whether he talked over special session possibilities with the President, but declared he saw ho justification for one.

The House Foreign Affairs chairman, who opposed all efforts to amend the neutrality act last session, predicted resumption of attempts to change the law. He pointed out that "cash and carry" provisions for transportation of war purchases by belligerents in their own ships would expire in the spring, and favored re-enactment. But he said "a change in conditions" might alter his opinion.

At the State Department it was said the Government is keeping out of the European crisis, nor has its advice or collaboration been asked or offered officially. There was said to be no change in principles previously laid down in speeches by the President and Secretary Hull.

• • • •

THE PRESIDENT again talked with Hull on the foreign situation and had lunch with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. With Francis Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, the President discussed progress of Great Britain and Canadian reciprocal trade negotiations. Sayre said afterward negotiations had not been halted by developments abroad. He said he hoped for early conclusion of a treaty.

Also a White House caller was Leon Jouhaux, president of the French Confederation of Labor, whose conference was arranged nearly three weeks ago. Officials said it had no connection with the European situation. To reporters, Jouhaux expressed incredulity that France and England have yielded to Hitler's demands.

Meanwhile, a high Administration financial official said he saw no reason why any stock exchange in this country should be closed if war breaks out in Europe. He said conditions would have to be far more serious than is now apparent to warrant such action. Although the stock exchange closed on outbreak of war in 1914, it was pointed out that the United States is now a creditor Nation with foreign money moving this way.

Senator Borah, recovering from a recent illness, issued a blunt declaration for a United States hands-off policy while a less explicit attitude of aloofness was appearing in Government quarters.

"Borah said whatever European nations see fit to do in their efforts to secure peace "is a matter upon which the European nations alone must pass judgment," as the peopleo f the United States "are not interested in European boundaries or in the plans of European nations in regard to European matters."

• • • •

BUT, HE SAID, former Premier Blum's proposal for American intervention to establish peace is "a matter of very great interest" to the people of this country.

"What such suggestion really means is that the United States involve itself in European controversies and furnish the money and the men which may be necessary in case of war," said the ranking minority member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"tI would have been more in harmony with that national honor, so often exemplified in French history, had Mr. Blum given his attention to the fact that France has a solemn treaty with Czechoslovakia to come to her rescue and, instead of advising the United States as to her duty, had advised his own people to courageously stand byt heir treaty.

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS: .

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, a leader of the mandatory neutrality bloc in the Senate, declared the neutrality act should be strengthened in event of war. He favored removing the President's discretion to proclaim a state of war exists before invoking the law, and removal of certain discretionary features he said still apply to "cash and carry" provisions. Nye said he saw no need for a special session.

In Oklahoma City, Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, said "we can't afford to let him (Hitler) run wild." Logan in an Associated Press interview said every effort should be made "to keep us out of it, but we might as well face the facts that world has grown smaller in the last few years and we're nearer those things. And we're ready to fight."

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau conferred with V. A. Mallet, counselor of the British Embassy; with Archie Lochhead, manager of the Treasury's stabilization fund, sitting in on the conference.

Asked if revision of the Johnson act, forbidding United States loans to war debtors, has been under discussion, Morgenthau said "I haven't heard of it."

Characters: Dudley Tooper, director of one of those air-wave quiz programs. Dot Tooper, his wife.

He (arriving home from the office)—Hell, darling. How's everything and who said, "Dam the torpedoes! Go ahead!"

She—Everything's fine. Farragut. Did you have a hard day? What queen said, "Let them eat cake?"

He—Rather hard. Mary Antoinette, I think. How're the children and what is the next line to, "When earth's last picture is painted and the tubes are twisted and dried," in a famous poem beginning that way?

She—Junior had a nosebleed. Ethel's got another tooth. I give up on that one. Are you going to shave before dinner?

He—Repeat the question, please.

She—Are you going to shave before dinner?

He—I think it was Napoleon.

She—You think who was Napoleon?

He—The fellow who always shaved before dinner and while we are on the subject, in what year was the first safety razor used and by whom?

She—I'm not sure about that but the oldest shaving mug in America is said to be owned by a man named Zissel who lives in Montana. America was discovered in 1492. Man o' War lost only one race in his career. Longfellow was the author of "Evangeline."

He—Where's my pipe?

• • • •

She—Who invented the cotton gin?

He—You heard me. Where's my pipe?

She—I won't tell you where your pipe is until you tell me who invented the cotton gin.

He—Alexander Bell.

She—Your pipe is over there on the radio.

He (not finding it)—You're wrong about my pipe, dear.

She—And you're wrong about Alexander Bell. It was a man named Whitney. What are you whistling?

He—A few bars from three famous songs of 25 years ago. I ask you to name them.

She—"I'm Only Chasing Rainbows," "Bedalia" and "What Did You Want to Make Those Eyes at Me For?"

He—Wrong. I'm whistling "You Made Me Do It," "The Good Old Summertime" and "Will You Love Me in December as You Did in May?"

She—I don't know whether I will or not.

He—Whether you will or not what?

She—Love you in December as I did in May.

He—That's a song. You weren't paying attention. When do we eat, what are we having and where are the Seminole Indians found?

She—In about 10 minutes. Liver. Florida. What time is it and how tall is the Empire State Building?

He—Very good. Half past six. I forget the exact figures, but will you compromise and let me give you the name of the first King of France ,the date of the Battle of Hastings and the principal ingredisnts of chow mein?

She—No. Hark! Do I hear the baby crying and if so, why?

He—You do. Give me a few seconds on the last part of that question . . . I've got it.

She—What?

He—It's the same as last night. The little fellow wants to know where porridge comes from, who is the largest manufacturer of rattles in North America and how long it takes a mother 5 feet 8 inches tall, traveling a yard nursery, taking two steps at a every two seconds, to reach the time.

No Kidding?

Sir Nevile Henderson was sitting in his embassy study when the telephone rang and Von Ribbentrop invited him to a talk.

Ambassador Henderson was not surprised when it was suggested that the quiet of the Ribbentrop home, Sonnenberg, on the outskirts of Berlin, should be the meeting place.

To Ambassador Henderson this was the opportunity he had been waiting for, and armed with the knowledge of his talks in London and with the advantage of informality he was prepared to speak frankly.

He did, but Von Ribbentrop remained unimpressed.

To everybody afterwards he said that neither Britain nor France would march for the Czechs. Even if France did mobilize, Britain would not do anything. In his opinion Adolf Hitler could win everything he wanted in Central and Eastern Europe without the risk of large-scale war.

This Ribbentrop reaction was no surprise to Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Minister Halifax.

Hull Termed Able in Crisis

By Mark Sullivan

Assurance Measure.

As America turns its eyes upon Europe and threat of war, there are some conditions in which the country can find—not peace of mind, for that is not possible—but at least a certain amount of assurance.

One is the personality of the man who conducts America's foreign relations, Cordell Hull. To have so fine and able a man as Secretary of State is a safeguard that America did not have the last time we were faced by European war.

At that time the Secretary of State was William Jennings Bryan. He had been given the office not for his suitability for the post, but largely for political reasons—partly in gratitude for his help in electing Woodrow Wilson President, partly in anticipation that he would keep his followers in Congress in line for the President's program. When Bryan was given the post, in 1913, no one dreamed that foreign affairs would be the chief concern of Wilson's Administration. Bryan, whatever his evangelical virtues, had not the equipment for diplomacy. When war broke out in Europe, Wilson felt obliged to have a, so to speak, unofficial Secretary of State, Col. House. In time, Bryan resigned.

TODAY AMERICA has as Secretary of State one of the highest grade minds in the country, worthy to be grouped with the ablest Secretaries of State America has ever had. The outstanding qualities of Mr. Hull are precisely those qualities that convey assurance in time of excitement and hair-trigger tension. He is poised, sure-footed, an exceptional combination of patience and firmpess. Yet he is not cold. He is capable of indignation, has passionate devotion to principle—but he is that sort of man who in proportion as his feelings grow warm his words grow calm, always with his emotions subordinated to his intellect. That intellect is an exceptionally strong and smooth-running mental mechanism. In this crisis, America can have reliance on Secretary Hull.

As America thinks about the crisis in Europe, it is well to understand the pattern that lies under it. True, some of it goes back to the Versailles treaty of peace following the Great War, but the causes going back to that are largely over the dam and down the river. The more immediate causes, the ones that America can still guard against, have to do with the arising of new conceptions of society and government in the world.

THE PROCESS BEGAN in 1917, in Russia. There, a small group who had got themselves into positions of leverage, set up a type of government and society utterly new in the world, which they called Communism. Among its tenets, private ownership of property was abolished.

Once they had established Communism in Russia, they set out to impose it on other countries, aiming ultimately to impose it on the world. They sent agents, provocateurs and money to many countries. In no country did they succeed. But in some countries especially Italy, their efforts went far enough to bring partial paralysis of industry, partial impotence of the existing government.

Thereupon in Italy arose yet another new form of society and government, recommending itself as an antidote for Communism. Fascism promised it would preserve the right of private ownership of property. Italy adopted Fascism.

By the same process, Fascism under another name, Nazism, got itself accepted as an antidote to Communism in Germany.

But Nazism and Fascism included dictatorship as surely as the Communism they were set up to oppose. What we have now in Europe is the Nazi dictatorship seeking to extend itself by suppression of other nationalities.

• • • •

WHAT IS THE LESSON FOR AMERICA? It is to bear in mind that in any country, once Communism goes far enough, the next development is sure. The Fascist or Nazi principle arises to neutralize Communism. It would happen that way in America. Always the process begins with attempt at Communism. It is Communism that is the first danger. If America resists Communism, it need not fear Nazism or Fascism.

There is a corollary lesson. What is it that makes both types of dictator, Stalin as well as Mussolini and Hitler, dangerous? Their power and their menace lies in the fact that great numbers of people subordinate their wills to them. It is not Hitler in person who is a menace to peace. It is not he as an individual who will make war. It is the German people who have subordinated their wills, indeed their whole personalities, to the one they call leader, "feuhrer."

The Great Betrayal

By Barnet Nover

Surrender At London

AT LONDON on Sunday Great Britain and France cast a fateful die. Europe, the British and French empires, the world, may be very different as a result of their action.

The projected deal with Hitler with regard to Czechoslovakia is not the first indication of the readiness of the European democracies to bow the knee to the dictators, if, in so doing, the present uncertain peace can be maintained for a while longer. But it is the latest and by all odds the most important. For with the abandonment of Czechoslovakia the last dike to aggression may have been destroyed.

• • • •

THE INACTION of the European democracies at the time of the Manchurian crisis of 1931-32 could be explained, if not justified, by the remoteness of the scene where the aggression was taking place; by the uncertainty regarding the policy which the United States was prepared to pursue; by the fact that Japan had something of a case, if largely a specious one.

The surrender to Mussolini on the Ethiopian issue was at least preceded by a half-hearted measure of resistance and followed for some little while by an adherence to legal forms.

The Spanish crisis was, in its inception, a domestic one with the international aspects carefully concealed for some months. And while strategically important because it commands the passage between the Atlantic and the Mediterranean and between France and North Africa, Spain is, after all, on the periphery of the European continent.

• • • •

CZECHOSLOVAKIA happens to be in the very heart of Europe. The most successful of the new states created out of the wreckage of the Hapsburg empire, its strategic importance is overwhelming. Whichever nation dominates what has been called "the bastion of Bohemia" is in a position to dominate the Danube Balley and the Balkan Peninsula.

This fact the Allies recognized during the World War. That was one reason why they looked with favor on the efforts of Masaryk and Benes to create an independent nation in the region which once was the Kingdom of Bohemia. That is why France allied herself to the new republic and why French statesmen have repeatedly declared that their nation would fight for Czechoslovakia's preservation. Yet under pressure from Great Britain the very men who only a fortnight ago solemnly reassured the Prague government that France would be faithful to her commitments are now asking Czechoslovakia to commit suicide.

THE SWORD with which Czechoslovakia is asked to commit harakiri is decorated with some withered flowers; but its sharp edge cannot be disguised. It is not yet clear how much of the Sudeten area the republic is to be asked to cede; but the very fact that the London plan calls for the cession of any territory at all suggests that Great Britain and France are prepared to wash their hands of the fate of Czechoslovakia. For if they are willing to give way now there is every reason to believe they will give way again.

In possession of the mountain heights, Germany will have what is left of Czechoslovakia at her mercy. And the treaty of guarantee of Czechoslovak independence which the democratic powers are said to include as part of their plan only adds insult to injury. If France has proved faithless to its long-standing treaty commitments with Czechoslovakia, the Prague government would have reason to believe that she might prove faithless again. And if the independence of Czechoslovakia means nothing to Great Britain now it would by the same token, mean nothing later.

What, in effect, Czechoslovakia is being asked to do is to exchange what she has regarded as gold bars for Confederate money. To be sure the gold bars turn out to be only gold bricks; but the coin with which Prague is to be paid off is also counterfeit.

• • • •

NO WONDER, then, that though faced by hopeless odds, Czechoslovakia may fight. And if she fights will France and Great Britain stand by with arms folded?

The London deal suggests that they will. But the odds are at least as great that they will not be able to, at least not indefinitely. By the very act of seeking to avoid a war, Great Britain and France may precipitate it. For the stand they have now taken is certain to increase the belief that Berlin, in an attack on Czechoslovakia will not lead to a general conflict from which the Third Reich may not emerge victorious.

IF CZECHOSLOVAKIA gives way, however, what then? Will it make for peace? Apparently Chamberlain thinks so and he has persuaded the French statesmen to his point of view. But there is nothing in past experience to suggest that Hitler will be satisfied with Czechoslovakia any more than he was satisfied with Austria. It is certain to encourage him to go forward and give him the wherewithal for an advance.

In the meantime, in helping, however reluctantly, in the destruction of the Czechoslovak barrier Great Britain and France have given the other aggressors a cue which they may not be long in following. At Trieste, Mussolini espoused the Nazi thesis on Czechoslovakia. He may be paid off in Spain, in Tunis, and elsewhere at British and French expense. And Japan can now reckon on less resistance from Great Britain than she has hitherto, should she seek to take over Hong Kong and drive the British out of Shanghai.

Aggression is like a snowball running down hill. A slight barrier may stop it at the outset; but as it grows and gains weight and momentum it can sweep even large obstacles before it. That is what has been happening in the world of nations during the last seven years; there is no reason to believe it will not continue to happen.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

W. M. HILEY, of the ICC., had enjoyed a Canadian vacation and was heading back this way when the towering hulk of Mount Washington (6,300 feet) engaged his attention. So he parked his car at Bretton Woods and started the climb afoot. At the top elevation, he spent an hour admiring the tremendous view that was New Hampshire in the distance.

Then, in the usual course of things, the clouds descended on the mountain top and HILEY began his descent. The descent, he found, became increasingly difficult; and walking, stumbling down, he pondered on how terrific would be a reclimb of the mountain.

To his growing consternation, he became aware of unfamiliarty in the landscape. Things weren't looking right; you know how that is.

Then the revelation: in the clouds his way had become lost; he had gone down the wrong side of the mountain. "Bretton Woods," said a native to his inquiry; "that's 42 miles from here by road; of course you can reclimb the mountain and . . ."

HILEY started walking the road. Finally he saw some people swimming and one proved to be a Massachusetts tourist. HILEY bargained for a ride; the New Englander drove a hard bargain.

"I hate to tell it on myself," Hiley said, on his return to the ICC.

C. ALPHONSO SMITH, who made the name of William E. Dodd (who purged at Representative Howard Smith) a household word in Virginia, has become an economics writer under the Land Utilization program, Agriculture Department.

Smith's career is something to elaborate on: Now 29, he was graduated (1931) with an A. B. degree from the University of Virginia, where his family was a part of the institution's tradition. He was once editor and publisher of The Albermarle (weekly) News; then worked as a salesman and copy writer for a nationally known pneumonia and bad cold salve company.

But somewhere in his 1,200 volume library he read the lines:

"I must go down to the sea again, where the Southern Cross hangs high;
"And all that I ask is a tall ship . . ."

So taking ship in New York, Smith shoveled coal between the Union of South Africa, Portugese East Africa, St. Helena, Trinidad, Malta, Greece, Italy, Turkey, Rumania, Ireland, England, and Germany. He crossed the Equator on a ship wherein all the passengers were old people; so the captain brought Smith (he was stout, had played football at the University) up from the hole to be the principal victim in the traditional rites paid to Neptune on Equatorial crossings.

They doused him and tarred him; every time he tried to climb out they pushed him back with long poles.

He concluded that sailors, like the captain, hate the sea, so quitting it in June, 1938, Smith became Dodd's campaign manager. And now he's with the Federal service (though this has nothing to do with his services for Dodd; he had worked toward the job long before Dodd decided to run).

In previous off-moments he has won between 50 and 60 championship cups (including the national championships) on tennis courts. His library of non-fiction could long be dwelt upon.

FRANK BANE'S leave-taking of the Social Security Board was splendidly extraordinary. He went to every SSB worker in town—and that covers all the hundreds in several buildings—and shook hands. A vast majority of them didn't even know who he was. For example, he extended his hand to one girl and said, "I want to say good-by and tell you how much I've enjoyed working with you." She had no notion of who he was or of what—in a rigid Government service—it was all about. They had all liked him, and he left with a handsome silver set and three expensive pipes.

More Than 83,000 Children Report to Classes for Fall Term

Her First Day

Happiest of the youngsters who reported at the Parkview School kindergarten for the first time yesterday, was Adele Goldstein, not quite 5 years old, shown hanging her wraps in the locker room.

Five-Year-Olds Get Together at Thomson School

These young ladies, all the same age, appeared delighted with their first day at school—especially when teacher decided they might find dressing dolls an interesting way to pass the hours. At right, Kitty Casey, a student at Western High School lends a helping hand distributing new textbooks.

Thomson School Songbirds

Some of the younger children who reported early, try out their vocal cords at assembly.

Traffic Patrol Boys Help

Allen Rumford, Richard Peppel and Max Freeman, members of the sixth grade patrol at Grant School, assisted in distributing supplies to the various classrooms.

Mothers Attend Classes With Younger Children

Short Girl Can Reduce, Nevertheless

Wand Good Instrument to Cut Down Waist and Keep a Stocky Figure in Proportion

By Ida Jean Kain.

IT IS always time to hand out the bouquets when one of those five-foot reducers—who has to put up a fight to lose even a pound—manages to take off any considerable weight.

"Mrs. Jones" in Oregon has taken off 27 pounds in three months. Since she is only a breath over five feet tall, this means she held herself rigorously to a 1,000 calorie diet—200 calories less than the average—for that time. There couldn't have been anything easy about it!

She Cut Down

Along with this weight reduction, she sheared several inches off her measurements: six and one-half off the waistline, six off the bust measurement, and five and one-fourth inches off the hips. Her new measurements are: bust, 37 inches; waist, 32½ inches; and hips, 41 inches.

Do you see anything wrong with that figure? The only thing wrong is that the waistline is too nearly the same size as the bust. It is only four and one-half inches less. With the loss of that much weight and in that length of time, this waist-measurement has not improved as it should have. Six and one-half inches is a lot to lose, but with stretching and twisting exercises, Mrs. Jones could have slimmed her waist down to 29 inches, making her proportions very good.

This is no criticism to Mrs. Jones. She has done exceptionally well. But I want all of you to be on guard against the disproportionate measurement when you reduce.

How to Be Less in Middle

Here are two exercises for this measurement. They are not strenuous but extremely slimming:

POSITION: Sitting on a low stool, feet locked around the stool legs to give a firm seat, and holding a wand back of the shoulders. (A broomstick is a good wand!)

MOVEMENT: Twist the shoulders vigorously, pointing one elbow straight out in front. This squeezes the fat pads about the waist. Repeat the exercise, twisting vigorously from one side to the other. Begin with twelve times for both sides, gradually increasing until you double the number. During the exercise hold the back straight, the chin in, the abdominal muscles up.

POSITION: The same, except that arms are stretched high overhead, hands grasping wand near the ends.

MOVEMENT: Pivot at the waist, out and down to one side, up and out at the other. Keep the back straight and stretch high overhead at the end of each revolution.

Collegians Take to Pants

THE DESIRE to get away from sweaters and skirts for campus life has led the girl, below, to suit herself with cinnamon wool slacks and matching shirt. According to Miss Nancy Hughes, right, New York stylist, on a visit here yesterday, several prominent women's colleges have sanctioned the wearing of pants in their classrooms.

College Slacks Go to Class, Says Stylist

Sweaters and Skirts Taking Back Seat Despite Deans of Women

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

WITH universities growing more and more tolerant of students' demands for practical higher education, common sense in style habits is becoming an accepted part of the curriculum in the most advanced women's colleges, according to Miss Nancy Hughes, fashion expert who visited Washington yesterday on business.

As public relations director of one of New York's most distinguished specialty stores, this captivating career girl, looking as youthful and washed-behind-the-ears as the type of merchandise she publicizes, was enthusiastic about the clothes freedom recently vouchsafed college students in classrooms and on campuses.

Pants on Campus

"In many of the Eastern girls' colleges," she said, "the sweater and skirt combine is being crowded out by slacks and shirts. Although there was an attempt toward this type of casualness last year, it gained little momentum because deans of women questioned the propriety of such liberality. However, the slacks have been sold to such an extent this fall that the campuses at Bennington and several of the East's leading schools will be dotted with pants-wearing students.

Miss Hughes, herself looking casual and carefree in raspberry tweeds and Scotch plaid, was gleeful over this broadmindedness of school girl's fall fashions, for she herself had an active hand in opening a handsome new younger set apparel shop in the residential park area of Washington.

Neatly Tailored

"The newly discovered collegiate preference for slacks," she said, "will not tend toward schoolroom sloppiness. Instead it will possibly promote more variety in wardrobes and greater neatness of appearance. Slacks will be trim, perfectly tailored editions of men's English flannels. Bagginess or sagging fabrics will be impossible because the 1938 slack is as flawless in cut, babric and fit as the finest Scotch tweed suit. Some slack ensembles selected by chic students are two-piece affairs of monotone wool in flattering tones, some are one-piece uniforms, zipped in and out of, and some are odd slacks and shirts or sweaters assembled with witty accessories.

For the college girl—whatever she wears—Miss Hughes has this advice: Buy one good basic garment and build your wardrobe around it. The same general rule should hold for the business girl, she says, or in fact any woman who would appear well dressed.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Plenned Economy

I should like some day to sit down quietly and consider
Just who I am and where I am going
To review the past and think over the present,
And plan for the future in ways
both little and big.
I should like to clean out the cluttered drawers of my mind,
And get organized to proceed logically—"What did you say? . . .
"The man for the laundry? . . .
Tell him its right there in the back hallway."

II

I should like to take a pencil and paper and plan out carefully
My winter wardrobe, yes and make a complete list
Of all the things I need at the 10-cent store,
And at the notion counter, and check over my cosmetics,
And then go out in a business-like manner and purchase
All that I need and be calmly ready to live—Oh, I must call Jane Right away, and see what she's going to wear to Ruth's party!

III

I really need to sit down and take stock of my friendships
There are letters I owe that are searing my conscience,
And people I'm wanting and needing to see,
And those I should call on; the really smart thing to do
Would be to make out a list and then go at it with system,
Weed the sheep from the goats—
My heavens! There's that committee
At 2, Mrs. Jingwit at 3, and tonight there's the Zumpkins!

IV

I should like very much sometime to sit pleasantly in the park,
With the first yellow leaves dropping softly about me,
And only the rustle of trees in the wind to disturb me,
And think ahead for even the next six months looming,
As to how I should use them to drain all their richness.
Six months are an aeon in this minute of life—"Who? . . . The man with tomatoes?
"No, we don't want any today." . . . Heavens! Look at that clock! I must call about groceries!

V

Oh, surely sometime I will sit down and quietly meditate
On what it is all about and where it is leading,
And why are we all rushing frantically hither and yon,
And what is the use of all this mad excitement
And chasing the clock? . . . Say,
I must surry up luncheon!
Or I'll be late at committee . . .
"Who? . . . The man from the cleaners? . . .
"All right, here's his money . . .
Mrs. Chirp on the phone? . . . I'll

Man Can't Do Housework and Advance Professionally, Long-Time Wife Tells "Dolores"

WHEN A WIFE doubles in brass by running a household while doing office work, yet finds her strength unequal to both tasks, is she safeguarding or undermining the marriage in pressing her husband into service as parlor maid and cook's assistant? The question was put to this column last Saturday, and readers' opinions asked. Today, a working wife gives her opinion, based on experience. Other letters deal with the salesgirl-dignified shopper controversy. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have read with interest the letter from "Dolores" and your reply in Saturday's Post. It seems to me (after 19 years of married life, some of them spent as a wage-earner) that your advice to her is eminently sound. Even if, in theory, an employed couple should share the housework fifty-fifty, in practice it seldom works out successfully. If a man won't do it, he won't.

Furthermore, I think "Dolores" ought to take a long-range view of her problem. Unless she really is the "man of the family"—in the sense that she earns more money than her husband, and has better prospects for advancement than he—she should be willing to sacrifice her comfort and possible leisure to his. She probably hopes, at some future day, to be able to stop working and devote herself to motherhood, but she can't do that unless her husband forges ahead in his job. And he can't advance unless he has not only ability, but also peace of mind and the buoyant spirit that comes of freedom from drudgery at the end of his working day. So it is up to her to give it to him.

Certainly if he is a professional man he needs that leisure time to devote to self-improvement. Even if he and she are both doing some what routine work in office or factory, he probably has a better chance than she has to step out of routine into something better. It may not be fair, but in the business and professional worlds, as well as in the home, the drudgery is usually left to us women, and we might as well take it and like it!

Of course, if "Dolores" is more brilliant than her husband—if she has a real future and he hasn't—then he should share the household routine, too. But it is a rare couple who can arrange their whole life on the implicit knowledge that the woman is superior to the man. Sincerely yours,

CONTENTED FORTY.

Bachelor Backs Salesgirls

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a hard-shell, long-time bachelor, I take sides with the salesgirls against the dignified dowagers in this recent controversy which has waged in your column, concerning the alleged insolence of the former's addressing the latter as "dearie" or "honey." It has been my observation that wholesome women of sociable nature are spontaneously kindly and affectionate, and that casual terms of endearment are a natural part of their vocabulary; as natural to them as breathing. And no woman save a complete stuffed-shirt would take exception to another woman's addressing her as "honey" or "dear."

My only quarrel with the salesgirls is this—why are they so foolish as to waste the sweetness of their nature on the desert air? Why flaunt the term "honey" in the face of a woman to whom the term "dearie," for instance, evidently comes under the head of a strange sound? After a lifetime of friendly and fairly impersonal association with women, I have come to the conclusion that those who season their conversation with affectionate pronouns are the products of a home environment where warm affection ruled.

Be you man or woman, you have to come from that sort of home yourself in order to recognize and appreciate the friendly spirit which prompts the informal salutation. To misconstrue it as cheap familiarity, and to resent or presume upon it, as the case may be, is to brand yourself an ignoramus, a stuffed-shirt, or vicious-minded. I sometimes think men have more intuition in this matter than most women have—regardless of the fact that women are supposed to be the more intuitive sex. FORTYISH BACHELOR.

She Feels Better Now

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Nothing in this world is so disgusting, so despicable, so thoroughly heartbreaking as the attitude everyone takes toward the poor working women of the cities. No more graphic illustration of this detestable attitude could be found than that exemplified in the letter from elderly women (recently published in your column) telling of their outrage and mortification at being called "dearie" by saleswomen.

Ten years ago I worked in a department store for one short week—it seemed like a century! —and the experience was so painful, due to the arrogance of the average stiff-necked, pride-poisoned shopper that I haven't outlived the memory of it yet. Subscribing to the rules of the management, I treated these female barbarians with outward respect, but what I called them under my breath, if spoken aloud, would have sent them shrieking for the first handy policeman!

I suppose they think it is a privilege and a pleasure for a saleswoman to stand on her feet all day, trying to read the minds and meet the demands of unreasonable customers who wouldn't know what they wanted if they saw it. I suppose they think a saleswoman finds it no trick at all to subscribe to Emily Post manners, while putting back ten million seven hundred and eighteen miscellaneous items, including dresses, lingerie, hose, cosmetics, etc., that have been mauled about by time-killing shoppers who are "just looking" and had no intention of buying in the first place.

It wouldn't surprise me if these saleswomen occasionally called a shopper "honey" or "dearie" with significant inflection, as the only possible means of showing justified contempt. A human being, driven to the limit, has got to let off steam somehow or bust—and this seems as subtle a means as any. Maybe if these dignified shoppers showed the saleswomen a little more consideration they might obviate the much-despised address of "dearie." Well, that's off my chest. I feel better now. I've been waiting 10 years for the chance to say it.

FOMER SALESGIRL.

A Woman's New York

by Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 19.

MISS SALLY CLARK, of Boston and Nahant, Johnny Roosevelt's pretty sister-in-law, turned up in our town the other day with black georgette dress and a sore throat. As soon as this pretty 18-year-old torch warbler was safely settled in her hotel, we press harpies were pounding on the door to ask what, why, how and all the rest of the stock questions.

We found that, in spite of the fact that she swings her silly little songs in a rumbling barytone, her speaking voice is high, which seems to fit her honey-colored hair, still worn in a long bob, with a fine set of bangs. Naturally we wanted to know how her fancy relatives and her new fiance, Mr. George Xavier McLanahan, felt about her sounding off in public. We learned, on her word, that they fell fine about it, her mother and the Roosevelts included. She did nedge a trifle on the subject of George (Yale, '37), whom she is to marry, come next January. Sally's comment on this was very deft and adroit.

"I wouldn't say he's strongly in favor of it," she said. "But he's in favor." Which means that the young man is not exactly nuts about having his sweetie stand up and trill before all those people. Perhaps he prefers his "A Tisket, a Tasket" in his own parlor. His point is understandable.

Be all this as it may, La Belle Clark will open an engagement at the swanky Persian Room of the swanky Plaza Hotel here a week from tonight, with a lot of her swell relations and friends at the ringside. Oh, well, why not, pray? Of course, we have a flock of native social-singers of our own, like Eve Symington, Addie Moffett and so on. And now we have to import them from Boston, forsooth!

A recent arrival is the aging but still handsome matinee idol, Tullio Carminati, who will be featured in the cast of a new operetta, "Great Lady." Irene Bordoni, the imperishable French doll, and Helen Ford, half-pint prima donna, are also scheduled for this tune show.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP).—A cut in receipts resulted in higher hog prices today, but the advance was held in check by indications of less satisfactory consumer demand at meat counters. Hogs ruled strong to 10 cents higher, and the top of 9.35 was a dime better than Saturday. The supply of 13,000 head was 3,000 less than expected and that much smaller than a week ago. Best finished cattle continue to attract steady prices, but medium to good grade steers weakened, losing 25 cents in some cases. The supply of cattle was larger than expected and consisted of a large percentage of Western grassers being moved off of ranges. Despite rather meager supplies, spring lambs met with poor demand, losing 15 to 25 cents in early rounds.

(U. S. Department of Agriculture).—HOGS—Receipts, 13,000, including 3,000 direct; barely active, strong to 10 higher than Friday's average; top, 9.35; good to choice, 200-260 pounds average, 9.00@9.30; heavier butchers scarce; extreme weights down to 8.35; smooth, 170-190 pounds, 8.75@9.00; good light packing sows largely 7.90@8.25; medium weights and heavies, 7.15@7.85.

CATTLE—Receipts, 19,000; calves, 2,500; strictly grainfed steers and long yearlings fully steady; fairly active trade on all grades light yearlings, including light heifer and mixed yearlings; medium to good grade steers 25 lower; early top prime steers, 13.25; several Idaos, 12.40@13.25; best heifers, 11.00; about 9,000 Western grassers in crop, but stocker and feeder supply comparatively small and replacement prices firm; Western bred stock calves up to 9.50; most stockers and feeder steers 7.75@9.00; beef cows mainly Western grassers in sizable supply; slow at 7.00 down to 5.00; cutter grade cows scarce, fully steady at 5.25 down to 4.00; bulls strong up to 6.75; vealers 25 lower; mainly 11.00 down to 9.00; few selects, 11.50.

The New Neighbors.

Politeness by politeness met
Will seldom lead to vain regret.
—Old Mother Nature.

Having eaten their fill of the delicious rushes for which they had gone to the lower end of the pond in the big slough, Jerry Muskrat and Mrs. Jerry swam back to the other end where their house was. As they approached it they discovered some one sitting on it. At first they thought it was Blacky the Crow, for whoever it was appeared all black. But as they drew nearer they saw that it wasn't Blacky, it was a stranger.

"I never have seen that fellow before," said Jerry to Mrs. Jerry. "The nerve of him sitting on the roof of our house just as if he owned it!"

"Do you suppose that it is Crowbill the Coot of whom Mrs. Black Duck told us?" asked Mrs. Jerry.

"You know as much about it as I do," replied Jerry.

They swam on and presently approached the house. As they drew near the stranger slipped down to the water and swam a short distance. On the water he looked as if he might belong to the Duck family. Anyway he sat on the water like a Duck.

"Look at his bill," said Mrs. Jerry.

Jerry looked. "Well, what about his bill?" asked he.

"It isn't flat. It isn't like the bills of most Ducks. I think that must be Crowbill the Coot," said Mrs. Jerry.

"We'll soon find out," replied Jerry, for he had noticed that the stranger was not swimming away but idly floating close by the house.

They reached the house and turned to face the stranger. They stared rather impolitely, I fear. The stranger's head and neck and his wings and little turned-up tail were more of a slate color, dark enough so that at a distance he had appeared to be all black. His bill was almost white, with two dark spots near the tip, and, as Jerry had said, it wasn't flat at all.

"Are you Crowbill the Coot?" asked Jerry bluntly.

The stranger admitted that he was. Then, as another dressed just as he was, swam out from behind the house, he added, "and this is Mrs. Crowbill. It is a nice place you have here. We wondered whose house this might be. It wasn't here in the spring when we stopped over on our way north."

"We weren't living here then. We were over in the Smiling Pool," exclaimed Mrs. Jerry.

"Why haven't we ever seen you before?" asked Jerry in his blunt manner.

"Have you always lived in the Smiling Pool?" asked Crowbill.

Mrs. Jerry nodded. "Practically always," said she.

"Then that explains it," replied Crowbill. "You see we never stop in the Smiling Pool."

"Why not?" Jerry wanted to know.

"Because we always have stopped here. We have seen the Smiling Pool as we passed over but never stopped because it isn't as well suited to our needs as is this place. We are rather retiring people and we like a place where there are plenty of reeds and rushes among which we can hide if need be. We love this kind of a place," replied Crowbill.

"Are you planning to stay long?" Mrs. Jerry asked.

It was Mrs. Crowbill who answered. "That depends," said she. "If there is plenty to eat and the hunters with terrible guns leave us alone we may stay until cold weather."

"I suppose then you will move on to the Sunny South," said Mrs. Jerry.

Crowbill nodded. "We will head that way," he agreed. "We are in no special hurry to get there and we'll stop at places where there is plenty to eat and there are no hunters."

Mrs. Crowbill sighed. "Every year such places are harder to find. These days we never know what to expect. We head for a place that always has been safe and find it is no longer," said she. "I hope you won't mind having us for neighbors for a while. We are quiet folk and mind our own business," she added.

GET COMFORTING RELIEF FROM Runny HEAD COLD

DO THIS: Put some Vicks VapoRub up each nostril and sniff well back. You'll feel better right away. Next, melt a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water; then breathe in the steaming medicated vapors for several minutes. This loosens phlegm and further clears the air-passages. At bedtime, rub VapoRub on throat, chest, and back so that its long-continued double action can relieve the misery of the cold while you sleep. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice; at the same time its medicated vapors, breathed in direct, bring comfort to the irritated air-passages. Try it.

One of the smartest propaganda jobs of the year is being carried on by oil interests against the Mexican oil seizures. It appears that martial music was played for John L. Lewis when he visited Mexico City; that an American tourist has died of cholera down there; that a foreign bakery owner has been murdered. All this from a sheet called "Looking at Mexico"—with a frown, no doubt.

"—bad news from the Rio Grande"

Also, three automobiles were held up on the Laredo-Mexico City highway near Actopan; near Los Reyes a car was attacked on the highway—two killed, three wounded; tourists have been delayed in Valles because the road was in bad shape; bandits sacked the village of San Miguel, not to mention the village of Ojo de Agua.

Someone spilled too much oil on those troubled waters.

To cap the climax of Prime Minister Chamberlain's dramatic flight to Hitlerdom, Sir Willmott Lewis, who represents the London Times and the British Empire in Washington, has been comparing Chamberlain with Abraham Lincoln. Lincoln wanted to preserve the Union, Chamberlain wants to preserve the world . . . "George Washington," said the American.

"Make out a title deed," said the Sultan, turning to his grand vizier, "for a suitable building and grounds to my friend, Sultan George Washington of America."

And that, with new plumbing and a little remodeling, is the American Legation today.

VPS Slashes Power Rate In Virginia

First Reductions Will Be Felt in January Bills; Cuts for Private, Commercial Users Range to 15 Per Cent

Richmond, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—The State corporation commission announced today the Virginia Public Service Co. had agreed to reductions in power rates that will amount ultimately to more than $350,000 annually.

This reduction announcement followed the recent settlement of a suit brought against the company by the State in connection with its holding company affiliations and equipment extension and replacement program. At that time the company agreed to inaugurate a building program to cost $3,000,000 and to forego common stock dividends until December 31, 1940.

In the announcement of the forthcoming rate reductions which will average about 15 per cent on or before October 1, 1939, the commission said that approximately $270,000 of the savings will apply to residential customers and about $80,000 to commercial customers.

The reductions will be accomplished in two steps, the commission said. The first will take effect January 1, 1939, and will amount to more than $200,000 a year. The second, to take effect not later than October 1, 1939, will amount to more than $150,000 a year.

The commission said 60,000 residential and 8,000 commercial customers would be benefited by the new rates.

Commissioner Lester Hooker said the commission "appreciates the spirit of co-operation shown by the officials of the company by agreeing to these reductions at this time."

The communities affected include Alexandria, Falls Church, Occoquan, Leesburg, Fairfax, Herndon, Vienna, Waterford, Middleburg, Hamilton, Hillsboro, Purcellville, Round Hill, Haymarket, Remington, The Plains, Warrenton, Hampton, Phoebus, Newport News, Altavista, Brookneal, Chatham, Gretna, Burkville, Crewe, Kenbridge, Victoria, Appomattox, Farmville, Pamplin, Alberta, Brodnax, Lawrenceville and Lacrosse, South Hill, Boydton, Chase City, Clarksville, Charlotte Court House, Clover, Drake's Branch, Halifax, Keyesville, Phenix, Scottsburg, South Boston, Buena Vista, Glasgow, Buchanan, Clifton Forge, Covington, Goshen, Lexington, Charlottesville and Columbia, Dillwyn, Louisa, Mineral, Gordonsville, Orange, Staunton, Waynesboro, Bridgewater, Dayton, Grottoes, Mount Crawford, New Market, Timberville, Edinburgh, Mount Jackson, Tom Brook and numerous other smaller Virginia communities and rural sections.

Soon to File Rates

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—M. J. O'Connell, president of the Virginia Public Service Co., said today the company's new rate schedules would be filed soon with the corporation commission and that the first savings to customers under the new rates would be reflected in January bills.

Additional reductions in many of the schedules, he said, would go into effect not later than Oct. 1, 1939.

"Savings to individual consumers will vary somewhat, of course, according to the amount of electricity used," O'Connell said, "but in general the reductions for the majority of residential customers will run from 10 to 15 per cent under the rate schedules now being prepared."

Wife of Public Enemy No. 2 Eager to Face New Charge

Barbara Bird, Her Sentence in Md. Over, Waives Extradition in Jail Break Case

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 19.—Mrs. Barbara Bird, 20-year-old blonde wife of Charles Bird, Midwestern desperado now serving 45 years for robbery in the Maryland State Prison, waived extradition today to face Federal charges of aiding her husband to escape jail in Cleveland last year.

James K. Cullen, United States commissioner, in a five-minute informal hearing in an empty courtroom, placed her bond at $15,000 after a brief exchange with the the prisoner.

"The problem I have here is whether you are the girl they want in Cleveland," he said.

"I am," Mrs. Bird said in a low voice. "I want to go back."

"You might as well and face the matter out there," the commissioner replied.

For a few minutes yesterday the expectant mother was free from the city jail after completing a 30-day term as an accessory to a robbery her husband committed here.

Police and a matron took her a few blocks in the rain to the Maryland Penitentiary, where her husband, the erstwhile public enemy No. 2, is serving 45 years for a series of robberies here.

After she talked to him for 45 minutes through a thick wire screen, police took her back to jail to await the Federal officers and the trip back to Cleveland, where her young son now lives with his grandparents.

"Keep your chin up, everything will work out all right," police said Bird told his wife.

Blue Army Set to Attack Gold Vaults

Gen. Kreuger Orders Officers to Pup Tents as Air Raid by Foe Is Feared

By the Associated Press.

Fort Meade, Md., Sept. 19.—The United States Army's mimic war in the Third Corps Area achieved actual war-time conditions tonight when a doughboy general, formerly a "brass hat" on the general staff, pitched his pup tent besides his troops in a pouring rain and ordered his aides: "Get wet with the men."

The officer was Brig. Gen. Walter Kreuger, commander of the Sixteenth Brigade and until June 30 chief ow ar plans at the War Department in Washington.

Because of the activity of "enemy" airplanes, he ordered all large wall tents, such as ranking officers usually use on maneuvers, taken down and pup tents substituted.

Gen. Kreuger predicted the of the "Blue" Brigade, scheduled to attack at dawn in an attempt to capture mythical gold vaults buried on the northern edge of Fort Meade and was the key figure in the climax maneuvers of the war games which began here Sept. 13.

The final problem began at 5 p. m. tonight with the disposition of troops over an area theoretically covering a large portion of Western and Southern Maryland, and will engage a large force of infantry, field artillery and tanks under Gen. Kreuger, and a much smaller unit of cavalry, field artillery and tanks under Col. Jonathan Wainwright.

The dispositions were completed in a pouring rain which kept up most of the day, turning the countryside into a morass and left many country roads nearly impassable.

Gen. Kreuger's force was encamped beside the Bowie race track, south of the Little Patuxent River, which was reported rising rapidly as a result of the heavy rainfall.

composed of 4,000 infantrymen and problem would prove "of great value" in the training operations and paid high tribute to the spirit of both "Red" and "Blue" forces under the adverse weather conditions.

"I haven't heard a growl out of a man yet," the general asserted. "The morale of the men is superb."

Defending the mythical gold vaults, similar in theory to those housing precious metals at Fort Knox and West Point, were some 400 cavalrymen of the "Red" army, awaiting reinforcements.

The invading "Blue" army was composed of 4,00 infantrymen and in theory extended from Frederick to Port Tobacco.

Noted Jurist Will Retire In December

Chief Judge Urner of 6th Maryland District Has Served Since '09; Firm in His Last Charge to Grand Jury

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 19.—Judge Hammond Urner, chief judge of the Sixth Judicial Circuit for 29 years, gave his last charge to a grand jury today, and brought a step nearer the close of his circuit court career started in 1909.

On December 4, Judge Urner will be 70 and be automatically retired from the bench.

There was no sign of approaching retirement in his official actions today.

"Anti-gaming laws can and should be enforced," he advised the jury firmly. "The fact that the owner or lessee of a slot machine has obtained a license for it, upon the pretense it permitted exercise of skill by the players, does not make its use lawful if in reality results of its manipulation depend wholly upon chance."

Judge Urner was born in Frederick, in 1868, and obtained his education at the Frederick Academy and Dickinson College. He entered his father's law firm, and in 1891 was admitted to the Frederick County bar.

He served as city attorney for Frederick for three years after 1898.

Elected chief judge of the Sixth Judicial Circuit in 1909, his candidacy for re-election in 1926 drew wide support from the legal fraternity.

A group of Baltimore lawyers, urging his re-election, at that time said his defeat "would be a shock to the Maryland bar.

He was re-elected by a wide margin over Samuel A. Lewis, receiving the largest vote that had ever been given a Republican candidate in the county.

The veteran judge's long record of service also includes activity in the Maryland Bar Association, of which he is a past president. In 1922 his friends put his name forward for appointment to a vacancy on the United States District Court, but that movement was dropped because of Judge Urner's own wishes.

Five years ago he joined several other judges in notifying the State comptroller that the latter could deduct 15 per cent from their salaries in order to help balance the State's budget.

School Bonds On Frederick Approved

Appellate Division Affirms Lower Court Opinion Ruling $300,000 Issue for Buildings Legal

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 19.—The Frederick County board of commissioners announced today a bid had been received for the start of the $545,000 school construction program.

The announcement came a few hours after the circuit court of appeals in Annapolis affirmed the legality of a $300,000 bond issue to finance the project with the aid of a PWA grant of $245,000.

Commissioner A. H. Derr said the bid was for $53,000 to cover construction of an elementary school for colored pupils.

A high school in Frederick City also is to be constructed and improvements are contemplated in county schools in the program. Bids for the $300,000 issue are returnable September 28, two days before the deadline set by the PWA for use of the grant.

The appeals court decision today was written by Chief Judge Carroll T. Bond, who said:

"The court being of the opinion that all conditions for the legal issue of the bonds in question on this appeal were fulfilled, it is ordered that the decree appealed from be and it is hereby affirmed."

The action was taken on a friendly suit brought by the county commissioners against the Frederick county board of education.

Under a 1937 act of the Legislature, the county was empowered to issue bonds for school construction, the cost of which should not exceed $300,000 if Federal aid was not received.

The commissioners contended that the technical wording of the bill might endanger the bonds since the Federal grant increased the amount to be spent in the program.

Christmas Seal Drive Planned in Virginia

Richmond, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—Headquarters of the Virginia Tuberculosis Association said today a series of 12 regional meetings would start next week to map plans for the Christmas Seal sales.

Celebrated Playwrights Launch New Activities

Famous Authors Become Producers of Own Plays; Massey an Ideal Choice to Play Lincoln; Mr. Blair Breezes by; in Mail and Over Wire; Theater Notes

IT IS a coterie of brilliant contributors to the distinction of the American theater that comprises the directorate of The Playwrights' Producing Company, Inc. These illustrious authors for the stage, who have banded together to produce their own plays, are Maxwell Anderson, S. N. Behrman, Sidney Howard, Elmer Rice, Robert E. Sherwood and John F. Wharton. There is no need to recount the many outstanding successes that have sprung from their gifted pens. It may not be amiss, however, to recall that four of them have been Pulitzer Prize winners—some of them, of course, more than once.

BELL.

The important thing, at the moment, is that The Playwrights' Producing Company is wasting no time in getting its activities in motion. Already two of their plays are nearing their premieres, with others to follow speedily upon their heels. These two are "Knickerbocker Holiday," the musical comedy with book by Maxwell Anderson and music by Kurt Weill, starring Walter Huston in the role of Peter Stuyvesant, and Robert E. Sherwood's play of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," with Raymond Massey in the title role. New scripts by Elmer Rice and S. N. Behrman are in the finishing stages.

Washington's prime interest, naturally, centers in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," scheduled for a pre-Broadway presentation in the National Theater the week of October 3. With reference to this play, there has been a great amount of ill-judged and silly to-do concerning the propriety of recruiting a Canadian actor, via London, to appear in the role of Lincoln. Raymond Massey, to be sure, was born in Toronto, Canada, but springs from American New Englanders who lived in and around Salem, Mass., for considerably more than a century. On his mother's side his forebears hail from the deep South—Alabama.

But apart from all that, when did it become a requirement of the theater that an historical character must be impersonated on the stage only by members of the nationality to which that character belonged? If the theater ever had surrendered to any such ridiculous fetich, Napoleon never would have been portrayed by anyone but Frenchmen, only an Englishman could play Wellington or Lord Nelson, and Bismarck must needs always be a German. And how about Julius Caesar? The premise is indefensible.

Furthermore, Mr. Massey has contributed too many fine performances to the American stage to be barred from the role for which he seems more perfectly equipped than any other actor who comes to mind. His "Ethan Frome" was a memorable addition to the gallery of distinctly native creations and in many films he also betrayed an American viewpoint beyond the measure of many native-born players.

If Philip Merivale could assume the role of George Washington—as he did in Maxwell Anderson's "Valley Forge"—I can perceive no valid reason why Massey should not be cast as Abraham Lincoln.

* * * *

Mr. Massey, by the way, will be seen again on the screen in the near future, when Alexander Korda's production of "Drums," in Technicolor, is unfurled for public view. "Drums" will be recalled as the adventurous subject previewed by an invited audience in the Rialto Theater a few weeks ago, with Sabu, the star of "Elephant Boy," in the stellar role. In this melodrama of garrison life in India, Mr. Massey is cast as an evil potentate who in the end is hoist by his own petard, as the saying is. This is mentioned only because the two Massey roles that are so imminent also are so strikingly in contrast that together they will convey an exceedingly concrete notion of the actor's versatility.

Incidentally, Raymond Massey and Robert Sherwood, author of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," are such close friends that when both are in London or New York they take turns raiding each other's icebox for after-theater snacks—at least, so Mr. Massey told me when he was here for the preview of H. G. Wells' "Things to Come," and Sherwood's "Idiot's Delight" was just on its way toward winning the Pulitzer Prize.

Yesterday's welcome visitor to the drayma desk was Rufus Blair, Paramount's peregrinating publicist, just in from Pittsburgh on one of his frequent transcontinental treks to make sure that his company is completely fulfilling the needs of the guys and gals of the press.

Rufe, so one gathers, is primarily concerned on this jaunt with the box-office potentialities of "If I Were King," starring Ronald Colman; "Men With Wings," the Technicolor cavalcade of American aviation; "The Arkansas Traveler,' starring Bob Burns, and Bing Crosby's "Sing You Sinners." If it were possible to sneak a peek at local booking sheets, it probably would be discovered that "If I Were King" and "Sing You Sinners" fall to the Loew allotment of Paramount product in Washington, and "Men With Wings" and "The Arkansas Traveler" to the Warner interests. All are ace pictures with nothing to choose among them, to hear the itinerant Mr. Blair tell it.

One of his major enthusiasms this time around is Ellen Drew, cast opposite Colman in "If I Were King" and opposite Fred MacMurray in "Sing You Sinners." Miss Drew, it seems, is looked upon as the likeliest of the younger actresses on the Paramount lot. She will be flying East shortly for the New York premiere of one of her pictures and the hint was dropped yesterday that she might include Washington in her itinerary for a day before returning to the West Coast and more glory, pictures and pelf.

Arriving in the Capital straight from Pittsburgh—a nice spot for that old "clean from Pittsburgh" gag—as he did, Rufus brought personal greetings to all his friends in town from Charlie Kurtzman, transferred not so long ago, you will remember, from the managership of Loew's Capitol Theater in this city to the ace Loew house up amongst the steel mills. Charlie is thriving, his theater is booming and he and "Mickey," his charming wife, are happy in their new affiliation, if that is what you wanted to know.

* * * *

Division Manager Carter T. Barron, of the Loew interests in this territory, is tossing another of his celebrated routs on Wednesday evening at 7, by way of launching the eleventh anniversary observance of the opening of the Capitol Theater and the theatrical social season. The telegraphic invitation had this to say, if you have to read all our mail: "Loew's Capitol, nee Loew's Fox, nee Fox, will celebrate its 11 young years of life next week and we want you to join with us in a little preview celebration at dinner Wednesday evening, September 21, at the Washington Hotel at 7. Please call and say you want to join our birthday party." I already have.

It is not difficult to remember that the Fox Theater opened, under Roxy auspices, in September, 1927, because I wasn't there. Being remotely and unimportantly involved in the opening of the Stanley Theater, in Baltimore, at about the same time, your reporter was in Baltimore that night muttering mild curses under his breath at the inexorable natural law that prevents a fellow's being in two places at the same time.

Although it has taken 11 years, I'll make up for it Wednesday night!

Speaking of out-of-town messages—as we were somewhere back there—Stanley Barlup, assistant manager of the Palace Theater, pretty-postage-cards from Edgewater, Md., in these words: "Down here on the Rhode River, near Annapolis, taking things easy, as you were doing, I hope, at Hains Point." Too noisy down at Hains Point, Stanley, so I came back to town where you aren't awakened from a sound sleep every two or three days!

And another one: "Am on the M-G-M 'Good News' program Thursday. Listen in if you can. Regards from the Irishman. PHIL REGAN."

Pleasant to hear from Phil again. Listening in is the least some of us can do after all that riding around with him and Mrs. Regan in that outsize Packard and late-partying at the Shoreham, when they were here on their last visit. That was 'way back when the ice carnival was the Blue Room hit and all the dancing had to be done on that rock salt they used for frozen water!

Phil, headlining the stage bill at the Capitol that week, was in the best voice he ever has displayed in Washington. His hot-foot and other "gags" were working all right, too.

* * * *

So the screenings start again. Today at 1:30, "Four Daughters"—missed when it opened the Silver Theater, in Silver Spring, Md., last Wednesday night—will be unwound for the dilatory by the Warners and tomorrow, at the same hour, the Loew high command is running "My Lucky Star," starring Sonja Henie, through the sprockets. This job doesn't seem to have changed so much.

THURSDAY MORNING the police discovered Gus Boell, a parachute jumper, perched atop the 700-foot Trylon at the World's Fair grounds. Boell was afraid to jump, because his parachute had become wet during the morning climb . . . When the police questioned him he assured them that nobody had promised him any money for making the jump . . . As a matter of fact, he was sponsored by a hat-store chain. Two weeks ago he went to the World's Fair offices, revealed his plan, but was warned it wouldn't work. "Mr. Boell," he was told, "your sponsor could only say of you that you were killed wearing a —— hat."

ORSON WELLES' Mercury Theater has been rehearsing a number of youngsters who will be called upon to shout one line in "Danton's Death," which will feature Martin Gabel and Vladimir Sokoloff . . . The youngsters, who are now being selected, will shout: "Up with Danton! Down with Robespierre!" . . . One of the applicants, who was impatient at having to wait his turn, finally was heard yesterday. He mounted the stage angrily and shouted: "Down with Danton! Up with Robespierre—and t'hell with Orson Welles!"

ONE OF THE REASONS why the Dodgers lost a double-header recently was because of a summons served on Manager Burleigh Grimes in the dugout. The summons is in connection with the suit brought by Burleigh's wife. Mrs. Grimes is being represented by William Richter, formerly of Sam Leibowitz's office, and his new associate, Sinclair Robinson . . . Gigli has settled with the Met., but he won't appear in "Aida." Instead, he'll do "Andrea Chenier" . . . George Z. Medalie says it isn't true that he no longer is friendly with Max Steuer.

THE TITLE of William K. Howard's Eastern-made movie, "Hometown," has been changed to "It Might Have Been You" . . . Alexander Woollcott will take to the lecture stages next month. His first spot will be Louisville, Ky. . . . Warden Johnson, of Alcatraz, won second prize in a contest sponsored by the Frisco Fair. Some of his competitors were the inmates at his prison . . . Six boys who tried to sneak into the Capitol Theater yesterday were caught and arrested. The picture the boys were trying to get in to see is M-G-M's "Boys' Town."

PEGGY CONKLIN, the ingenue, became the mother of a boy yesterday. Her husband phoned the tidings to their friend. Arlene Francis, who is being starred on the "What's My Name?" radio program . . . "The baby weighs 7 pounds and 11 ounces," the new father elated . . . "Maybe I can work it into the program," Miss Francis said. "What're you going to call him?" . . . "Well," was the answer, "he weighed 7-11. Just tell 'em all we'll call him 'Craps.'"

* * * *

RUSSELL SWANN, the magician, now is receiving offers to return to London's Dorchester House, although at his last engagement there it appeared that he might become barred from England . . . In his routine Swann offers one end of a rope to a ringsider, lures him to the floor and permits him to stand there—doing nothing. One night the butt of this joke was a young Britisher—who liked it so much that thereafter he brought his friends to be victimized in the same way . . . "Dreadful, dreadful," the manager berated Swann after the show . . . "Why?" the magician protested. "It worked okay, didn't it?" . . . "Yes," the manager informed, "but, Mr. Swann—that man was the Duke of Kent."

Screen Career Is Wide Open For Talented

Casting Directors Are in Constant Search for Leading Men and Capable Women

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—The question asked us more often than any other is: How can I get into the movies?

Until today, when we learned the answer, we had to shrug our shoulders and mumble something about getting the breaks and knowing the right people. That's the standard reply and, according to James Moore, the man who hunts new faces for the R-K-O cameras, it's all wrong.

"You don't need pull to get into the movies as an actor," he said. "But you do need ability and a camera personality. There are plenty of character people, comedians, ingenues and other specialists in Hollywood, but there is a real shortage of leading men and women.

"If you are a beautiful girl, say, with plenty of intelligence, you don't need to be a producer's girl friend. You don't even have to look for work. One studio or another will find you. Of course, it does help if you can make the hunt a little easier for the studio.

Go Job Hunting.

"I believe thus that the best way for anyone to get into the pictures is to come to Hollywood, look around a bit, and make a connection with a reputable Little Theater. These Little Theaters have dramatic schools in connection and the honest ones charge a straight $50 a month or so for instruction.

"If you're no go as an actor, the Little Theater will tell you so. If you do show an possibilities, pretty soon you'll be taking a part in one of the Little Theater's shows. That's where I come in, and all the other talent directors, agents and whatnots.

"We're always on hand at these performances, spotting possible players. Last week I went to ten Little Theater shows. In the last 14 weeks I have found eight young men and women in these Little Theaters and given them camera tests. Agents found as many more and brought them to me. Some of them undoubtedly will be stars in another couple of years.

"The only trouble is that Hollywood is festooned with Little Theaters. There are more than 50 of them in this vicinity. Some are plain rackets, which sell stage roles to the highest bidders. Others aren't quite so bad, while a few are strictly high grade. There are only about a dozen of this latter kind and these are the ones that are haunted by the men whose job it is to find new faces for the movies."

Guild Will Help.

"You ask how can a movie hopeful locate one of these legitimate establishments and not get taken by a gyp joint. That's easy, too. All she has to do is get in touch with the Screen Actor's Guild. It is glad to recommend the good ones."

Moore said he was pestered constantly by friends, acquaintances and folks he's never heard of, all with proteges who wanted screen tests.

"Of course it's difficult for me to see what a person really can do in an interview," he continued. "Mostly they are inexperienced and can do nothing. Whereas if they do attend a dramatic school, take part in a Little Theater stage play, and show me as a member of the audience that they've got something, the battle's already half won."

The shortage of leading men and women is an obvious one.

"There are plenty of smart people," Moore said. "There are plenty of handsome ones. But the truth is that most beautiful girls are dumb. The same goes for men. And most intelligent people are none too pretty. I guess that's Nature's method of evening things up, but it's tough on the movies.

Talented Can't Escape

"But every once in a while somebody does turn up who combines intelligence with a camera face and if she turns up in Hollywood, she can't escape getting movie offers, even if she doesn't want them.

"I've used the word 'she' through all this. I should have said 'he.' It is true that we need leading women, but we need leading men even worse. This very minute I've got places for two new leading men and I haven't been able to find anyone who can fill the bill."

We sucked in our breath at that, stood up straight and stuck out our chin, but Moore said he guessed we'd better continue being a newspaper reporter. So the road to fame and fortune in the movies is wide open and if you've got what it takes—including several hundred dollars for expenses—we wish you well.

Maybe we'll be knocking on your dressing-room door. The one with the red star on it, a couple of years hence, and asking you for an interview for the papers.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 19.—Well, well! It took that mighty lull between Government investigations and the peppy build-up for "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year," for which they're going to spend nearly a million dollars, to put motion pictures on the share-and-share-alike footing.

HEDDA HOPPER

Ernst Lubitsch and Myron Selznick, his manager—now producer—shot off the first gun. Selznick's scheme is to organize producing units around the stars he manages and make pictures independently. Producer, stars, writers and directors will all be shareholders and split the profits. No set salaries under this co-operative scheme, which has all Hollywood tremendously excited. Other stars and directors are watching the outcome with bated breath so they can plunge in and do likewise. The authors talked about it—tried to put it through years ago. Especially successful playwrights, who said the only way they could work was to get an idea, write it, nurse it like a new-born babe throuh rehearsals and allow the public to be their guide.

Everyone in Hollywood thumbed down the idea and kept saying: "But this is Hollywood . . . pictures . . . it's different—not a one-man job. You can't do that here. You get a good idea, but 20 or 30 writers will make it better."

On a percentage basis, you're working for yourself and you're going to be mighty careful. Stars who have been getting $150,000 a picture and are now willing to take $10,000 and wait for the profits will watch their step, both in and out of the studio. This has been done in the show business for years, but profit sharing is revolutionary in Hollywood. It will do away with lots of cushy jobs.

Do you know the difference between producer and supervisor? It's $500 to $1,000 a week more salary. How do I know? A producer's wife told me—honestly!

I should think Warners could float that new $26,000,000 bond issue from the Inglewood track. I understand next year they'll build a picture theater opposite to take care of the overflow.

Owing to the refusal of Dick Powell and Errol Flynn to play in "Garden of the Moon" and "Sister Act" (now called "Four Daughters"), John Payne and Jeffery Lynn have given those boys some mighty stiff competition. In the later picture John Garfield is so good they're waving the flag for him. They've got him now in "Blackwell's Island." Then he does "Each Dawn I Die." After this build-up he'd better be good.

Vincent Price, Helen Hayes' Prince Albert in "Victoria Regina," is testing for Maximilian in "The Phantom Crown."

I asked Bette Davis if she'd play Scarlett if it were offered. She said, "It's gone with my memory. My mind is on Tailwaggers." I told her about dashing into a drive-in for a sandwich and seeing a Pekingese wandering about. When I asked who owned it, the attendant said, "Don't know—it's been here since yesterday."

So I took a look at it. It had a Tailwaggers disk on it, which read, "Please notify police Tailwagger 3124 has been found." I did and the owner was there to claim her pet before I'l finished my coffee.

At the Doggie party on August 11, as part of the entertainment, we expect to have Rosa Ponselle's Scottie, Whiskers, and Frank Forrest's Doberman Pincher, Impy, sing high C's with their owners—one of the funniest sights ever witnessed.

Whiskers gave his performance for Mrs. James Farley the other night and it had her in stitches. Hal Roach offered Rosa a contract for him. It would be just like Hollygood if Rosa made her debut in pictures through her dog, Whiskers.

Bill Boyd and wife own three homes, but after each "Hopalong Cassidy" picture is finished they strike out in their station wagon and sleep rolled up like mummies in a bag under the stars.

For a minute, Bob Burns, locationing at Lake Malibu, thought he was back in Arkansas when a California cyclon swept down and carried the dining tent down the valley. "Gosh!" said Bob; I'm glad it didn't pick up my bazooka—I'd be out looking for a job!"

First Role

Philip Terry's first role since signing his Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract will be in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Vacation from Love," which features Florence Rice and Dennis O' Keefe. He will portray an orchestra leader. It is the tenth time he has played a band maestro since making his screen debut.

Nats Go on Hitting Rampage to Wallop Tigers, 12-2

This Morning

With Walter Haight

Subbing for Povich

Hoist the flags! Shoot the cannons! Strike up the band! And come on chillen, les' dance!

For strange as it seems, believe it or not and would you ever think—Haight has received a fan letter! Not a postcard, mind you, but a real, honest-to-goodness fan letter—even if it was signed "Yours In Sports."

HAIGHT.

In part, it reads, "With your knack for telling stories, why don't you write a book?"

Well, my dear friend "Yours In Sports," what do you think my story "Bred To Run" was—a 5-word night letter"

To save the publishers a chance of turning this one down I will now review a book that I will NOT write. It might have been named, "SOMETHING ON THE BALL" (by Walter Haight; Typographical Error Pub. Co.; handout).

What a Story!

Spank Miller, a rookie from the South Atlantic League, slams the ball over the fence for a home run in his first time at bat in the majors. When he comes in from the outfield the following inning, a beautiful girl sitting in a box near the dugout, holds out a new baseball and a fountain pen and asks Spank for his autograph. Spank writes his name on the ball and is about to hand it back when the girl says, "You forgot to dot the eye." Spank attempted to comply and put a big ink spot on the ball. He apologized. He apologized. He laughed.

Spank soon earned a berth as a regular and to his amazement found that the girl who had asked for his autograph was Sally Brownwell, daughter of the president of his ball club. Although he was too bashful to ask her for a date, she was Spank's inspiration. As the season progressed and the big league curves began taking quicker breaks, Spank's batting average began to dwindle.

He was leaving the ball park one evening, after getting nothing for five, when he met Sally Brownwell. Sally suggested that Spank come home to dinner. Spank accepted the invitation and it was definitely Sally for Spank from then on.

Regains Batting Eye

Spank almost immediately regained his batting eye. He had boosted his batting average back into the .300 class. Life was worth Living for Spank until he came out of the shower after game one day with a towel over his face and heard a conversation between Lefty Hook, the ace pitcher, and Grounder Grimm, the club's second sacker.

"I see Sally's at it again," said Lefty, Everytime we get a rookie and he slumps, her old man sicks Sally onto him and he thinks she's in love with him. See how that Spank kid started slamming the ball just as soon as Sally began inspiring him?"

That was enough for Spank. He didn't meet Sally for that dinner date that night. He didn't even look at the box where she always sat. He went into a batting slump again and his fielding fell off. He was benched but he didn't mind—anything to get away from this ball club. Finally he was shipped back to the minors.

Tried to Forget

He tried to forget Sally but he couldn't. Then he determined to show her that he was a real ball player. He would knock the stitches off the ball and get to the majors with another club. He did just that. One of the scouts of theother big league picked him up.

The following year, Sally's father's club won the pennant and Spanks club took down the flag in theother circuit. Spank was jubilant. He had his chance for revenge. He would pound her father's pitchers and get his revenge.

Spank did hit a home run in the first game and as he crossed the plate he looked over at the Brownwell box but Sally wasn't there. He got his share of hits as the series progressed but he did not see Sally. The other Brownwells were there and Spank began to believe that she purposely stayed away from the games because of him.

The clubs lines-up for the deciding game of the series. The crowd was so large that temporary stands had been built behind Span's post in centerfield. Came the ninth inning. Spank's club was leading 4-3 with two out and the bases filled. The batter slammed a line drive to centerfield. Spank turned and ran back. Just as the ball was going over his head, Spank leaped, clutched it and fell over backward into the temporary stands. The ball fell out of his glove. He knew he had caught it legitimately but he must have something to show. As fans were pushing him to his feet he felt something hit in his glove.

All's Well That—

It was a ball. Spank held it up. The game was over. He was almost carried off the field.

But in the dressing room,Spank sat on the bench in front of his locker. "Well, we won the series. I've avenged myself but, believe me, I'd go back to the minors if I had Sally. Why didn't she ever come to see a game?" mused Spank.

He reached in his back pocket for his handkerchief and pulled out the ball that he had caught to end the game.

He rubbed it between his hands and suddenly bounded to his feet at the sight of it.

There was some writing on the ball—and a big blotch of ink!

Spank leaped for the phone. The end.

Two Stars Tie for Medal; Mrs. Davy Meets Patty Berg

Miss Dettweiler and Mrs. Davey Get 93s; Helen Meets Tough Foe Today in Miss McLeod

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Helen Dettweiler and Mrs. Myron Davy shared pace-making honors for the Washington contingent in the Women's National golf championship today, each carding 93s to just slip into qualifying berths for match play starting tomorrow. Miss Dettweiler had nines of 47-46, with Mrs. Davy reversing those figures.

Mrs. Davy draws the toughest assignment of the entire field today in Patty Berg, the Minneapolis redhead, who scored 43, 42—85. Helen Dettweiler, the former District and present Maryland State champion, meets Betsy MacLeon, Williamsville, who was also among the low scorers with 41, 44—85.

Battles Wind and Rain

Miss Dettweiler, encountering trouble with the high winds and rain which raked the difficult course, was in the rough on the first three holes, slipping over par a stroke on each. She was short with her second on the fourth, taking a bogey five, was trapped and took a two over par at the fifth and was in the rough or traps with her tee shots as she slipped over par on the next four holes.

A three-putt green was largely responsible for a six on the tenth. At the thirteenth she dropped a 20-foot putt for her only birdie. She was short and slipped over par on the fourteenth and fifteenth and was in traps on the next two holes, having trouble getting out at the short seventeenth and taking a bad five. She parred the eighteenth.

Mrs. Davy Steadies

Mrs. Davy, with four straight sixes picked up largely through three putt greens, steadied to battle the weather fairly evenly and slip in a par at the sixth and a birdie four at the long eighth. She had three pars coming home but failed to clip regulation figures.

Her card:

Out	6	6	6	6	4	5	4	5	—46
In	6	5	5	4	4	6	6	6	5—47—93

Mrs. Bishop Hall and Miss Marion Brown each encountered plenty of trouble with the high winds and soggy greens. Mrs. Hill, with a 99, and Miss Brown, at the same total, were left out of the qualifying picture.

Noble Boy Wins Autumn Purse

Detroit, Sept. 19 (AP).—The Bomar Stable's Noble Boy scored his second straight victory of the fall race meeting at the Fair Grounds by annexing the $900 Autumn Purse today.

The 4-year-old bay gelding finished a length in front of U-Boat with Running Scale third. Night Editor, victor in his last two starts and an even-money choice today, finished out of the money.

Given a hustling ride by Jockey Joe Cowley, Noble Boy covered the 6 furlongs in 1:14 2-5.

Prices on Noble Boy were $10.20 to win, $4.40 to place and $3.40 to show. U-Boat paid $4.60 and $3, while Running Scale returned $5.80.

Manie O'Hara Takes Hawthorne Feature

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP).—Manie O'Hara raced to her sixth victory of the year in the Van Buren Purse at Hawthorne today. Forever Prince was two and a half lengths behind, with Chief Menteur, the early leader, third.

Manie O'Hara never was far off the pace and Jockey James Wilson sent her into the lead at the top of the stretch. The time for the six furlongs over a heavy track was 1:19. The winner paid $4.

Mrs. Davy's 93 Result of Long Practice

Capital Woman Worked Hard Hours to Reduce Score; Will Oppose Miss Berg Today

Mrs. Myron Davy's feat of qualifying for the match play rounds in the Women's National Championship yesterday in Willmette, Ill., with a score of 93, and the fact that she draws the ranking favorite, Patty Berg, in today's first round of match play, climaxes a year's hard work and a year's ambitions.

In the spring of 1937, Mrs. Davy, here from Mexico, played in the tournaments of the local Women's Golf Association with a 30 handicap, and her scores were around the 115 mark. By the end of the year she won the prize for the greatest handicap reduction, as she brought it down to 11 strokes.

Through the winter months Mrs. Davy played, rain or shine, practiced daily, including hours at a time on the putting green. Through the spring and summer tournaments schedule her formula was the same, practice, play and putt.

On the eve of the Maryland State Championship Mrs. Davy had reduced her handicap to 8, and qualified with ninth lowest score in the field of 62. She easily made the championship flight, pulled three successive upsets, each bigger than the other, over Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Mrs. Charlotte Stern and Miss Elizabeth Janney, and advanced to the semifinal round of the State event. There she lost to Mrs. Jerome Sloman.

The following week she qualified for the District Championship, but lost in the first round. From then until the entries close for the National Championship, several rounds

Top Stars Shoot 80s to Tie for Medal; Rain, Cold, High Wind Make Course Bad, Playing Difficult

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP).—Two stars from the South and West Coast, battling gamely against rain, cold and high winds which had most of the field groggy, divided medalist honors today in the qualifying round of the forty-second national women's golf championship.

Playing water-soaked Westmoreland course like the defending champion she is, Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Chapel Hill, N. C., turned in a card of 41, 39—80, 1 over par.

A few minutes later Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, sloshed off the eighteenth green with an identical total, built of nines of 40, 40, to share the hole of pacemaker into tomorrow's match-play competition.

Those two remarkable performances blazed brightly through the remainder of a dark, dreary day which saw a score of highly regarded contestants put to rout by elusive par and the elements.

Mrs. Page Betters Par

Only once was par bettered for nine holes, and Mrs. Page earned that honor. After slipping 2 shots over par going out, she came home with her 1-under-par 39 by virtue of birdies on the thirteenth, sixteenth and eighteenth greens, putting beautifully on the drenched carpets.

Miss Traung, one of the finest players developed on the West Coast in years, had two birdies and an eagle. The latter was a spectacular 3 on the par 5 twelfth with two fine woods and a 9-foot putt.

Three strokes off the pace was Marion Miley, daughter of a Lexington, Ky., professional. She had a card of 41-42—83, a shot under the totals of Maureen Orcutt, veteran from Haworth, N. J., and two members of the British Curtis Cup team—Clarrie Tiernan, of Baltray, Ireland, and Jessie Anderson, of Perth, Scotland.

Miss Tiernan, who remarked "it was so cold I wasn't sure I had any toes left," had nines of 42—42, with Miss Anderson registering 43—41.

Ellamae Williams, of Chicago; Betsy MacLead, of Williamsville, N. Y., and Patty Berg, highly rated Minneapolis star, had 85s—with the field strung far back from that figure.

Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., could do no better than 87, while Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, six times winner of the crown, posted a 90.

With the exception of Miss Tiernan and Miss Anderson, the remainder of the British contingent lost decisions to the weather and Westmoreland's heavily trapped terrain. Their scores were: Mrs. J. B. Walker, 88; Phyllis Wade and Mrs. A. C. Critchley, 90s, and Nan Steel Baird, 94.

The leader's cards:

Has 18 Handicap

Mrs. McNitt's District handicap is 19, but thet ournament limit is 18, thus she plays under the latter. Mrs. Scott's handicap is 7, making the difference 11, and seven-eighths of the difference is 10. Mrs. McNitt will receive four strokes on the first nine, and six on the second, according to he card.

The tournament morks Mrs. Scott's main bid for a local title since foregoing competitive golf after several impressive performances in sectional tournaments in 1935. She won the Colorado State championship in 1931 and again in 1933.

Mrs. McNitt Improved

Mrs. McNitt, playing golf for the third year, has improved greatly and was a member of the Congressional Club's second team champions in the spring matches.

Mrs. Scott's victims in her march to the title round included Mrs. J. W. Cramer, Miss Bernice Baker, Mrs. Woodlief Thomas and Mrs. Betty Meckley, tournament medalist and favorite, who was upset 2 and 1 in the semifinals.

Mrs. McNitt numbered the host club mother and daughter duo among her first and second round victims. Mrs. and Miss Simons then defeatde Mrs. Henry Goodman and also pulled a semifinal upset over Mrs. Leo Walper.

Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, District Women's Golf Association president, will present the prizes, including the new Post trophy. The Post medalist prize to Mrs. Meckley, and the original cup, now in its sixth year of competition, to the winner, to be held as many years as she reigns as champion. Other prizes will be awarded by the association.

Mrs. McNitt has played and practiced during the three-day intermission, but Mrs. Scott has not braved the inclement weather and has not touched a club since Friday's semifinals.

Lou Nova Replaces Bob Pastor on Card

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Lou Nova, Oakland, Calif., heavyweight, today replaced Bob Pastor as the opponent for Gunnar Barlund, of Finland, in a 15-round bout at Madison Square Garden, October 3.

Pastor cut his leg with an axe about two weeks ago and the injury has failed to respond to treatment.

Pitches No-Hit Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Sept. 19.—Mentzer, regular pitcher for the Hagerstown Chevies, pitched a no-hit game against the Antietams in playoff series in the Washington County League. One run was scored off Mentzer on four bases on balls in the first inning. The score was 4 to 1.

Net Event Off

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 19.—Owing to the rains, the tennis exhibition in which Bobby Riggs, Joseph Hunt and others were to figure did not take place today but will be held tomorrow.

Rain Balks Gevinson-Quarles; Set Tonight

Postponed last night because of a heavy all-day rainfall, the 10-round bout between Norment Quarles and Lou Gevinson will be staged tonight at Griffith Stadium. The entire supporting card will be held over.

Neither participant weighed in yesterday as the program was definitely postponed at noon when the Weather Bureau reported that rain would continue throughout the afternoon and evening. The idea of moving the bout indoors at Turner's Arena was rejected because of the heavy advance ticket sale, which indicated that the Arena would not accommodate enough fans.

Gevinson, meanwhile, remained a favorite to whip the blond Southern boy, with the odds on him increasing to 8-5. The hawk-nosed southpaw followed his quaint custom of reporting for duty at the Treasury Department, going to the gymnasium after office hours for a brief, limbering up session.

Quarles motored back to Richmond after the bout was officially called off, and will return this morning. He preferred, he said, to work out in his home gym. He is in excellent condition and will be ready for the bell tonight and is confident of stopping the District boy. Chris Dundee, Quarles' manager, arrived in town yesterday morning from New York, and nearly fell down when he saw the odds being offered against his boy.

"They must think Norment is going in there to lose," he remarked. "They must think he's washed up, or something, to make Gevinson such a heavy favorite. Nine to five," he hummed. "That's like money from home," and with a quick glance at his capital he hurried off to wager a sizable sum on Quarles.

The fighters will weigh in this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Gevinson is expected to come in at approximately 134 pounds, and Quarles will be about a pound heavier.

Johnny Tejera, of Richmond, battles Bob Mathias, an amateur making his professional debut, in the six-round semifinal. In other sixes El Brookman, this city, tangles with Carl Dell, and Billy Bullock meets Joe Perry. A four-rounder will open the card.

Play Washington Post Cup Finals Today

Mrs. McNitt (left) and Mrs. Jack Scott will play the final round of The Washington Post Women's Cup Tournament over the Manor Country Club course today. The event was postponed from last Saturday because of rain. Mrs. Payne, chairman of the District Women's Golf Association, said yesterday that the finals would be played today "rain or shine."

10-Stroke Allotment Congressional Player in Good Spot to Take Crown in Finals Today

By Mcrrell W. Whittlesey.

The delayed final match in The Washington Post Women's Match Ulay Handicap Championship will be played this morning, rain or shine, at Manor between Mrs. Jack Scott, registered unattached at present, and Mrs. Arnold McNitt, the surprise finalist from Congressional.

The title encounter is scheduled at 9:30 a. m. after being postponed when an early morning downpour left play virtually impossible on Saturday. The consolation finals, between Mrs. A. A. McEntee, of Kenwood, and Mrs. Harvey J. Cooper, of the host club, will be played at 9:25.

In the principal match, for the crown vacated by Marion Brown, District champion, Mrs. McNitt, a comparative newcomer to local tournament golf, will be in the favorite's role, due to her 10 handicap stroke allowance from Mrs. Scott.

Bert Niehoff Named Jersey City Manager

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Bert Niehoff, for the last two years manager of the Louisville Club of the American Association, was appointed manager of the Jersey City Giants today by Horace Stoneham, president of the International League club and its parent organization, the New York Giants.

Niehoff succeeds Hank Deberry, who took over the reins from Travis Jackson in mid-July. Deberry will return to the Giants' scouting staff, according to Eddie Brannick, secretary of the New York club.

Yanks Walloped, 13-1, By Browns, on 17 Hits

Pennant Winners Fall Apart Under Smashing Drive of 7th Place Club; Wes Ferrell Is Routed in 5th on 8-Run Outburst; Mills Gives 6 Blows

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Sept. 19.—The Yankees fell apart today. The team that won its third straight American League pennant yesterday lost to the St. Louis Browns, 13 to 1, with three second-string hurlers failing to stem the seventh place clubs' attack.

The game the season's final between the two clubs. The Yanks won 15, the Browns seven, in the year's play. The victory gave the Browns a sweep of the final three-game series.

With the pennant won, Joe McCarthy sent Wes DFerrell to the mound. The Browns greeted him with two runs on George McQuinn's homer in the first, picked up two more in the second and then got him out of there with an eight-run outburst in the fifth.

WES FERRELL.

Ivy Paul Andrews replaced Ferrell in the midst of the rally and lasted until the sixth when Steve Sundra came in to finish the game. The Browns collected 17 hits, seven of them in the fifth, off the trio.

While all this was going on Howard Mills limited the champions to six hits. After the first inning the Yanks played without Lou Gehrig.

Eyston to Make New Speed Test On Utah's Flats

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Sept. 19 (AP).—Fired by a secret ambition to hold every record at one time, Capt. George E. T. Eyston, quiet retired British army officer, rushed plans today for another lightning-like ride across this lake bed, Wednesday.

Behind the graying captain's desire to hoist his own unprecedented mark of 357.5 miles per hour for the measured mile and to test further numerous changes in his car are these reasons:

He hopes to lift the record to a point—possibly 365 miles per hour—where none can touch it for at least one year.

He expects to recoup the fortune—reputedly $250,000—spent winning, then defending, the title.

Bonura Gets Homer With One Aboard

Taft Wright Triples With Bases Full in 6th When Griffmen Score 7; Appleton Allows 5 Blows

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, Sept. 10.—A surprisingly belligerent and potent delegation of Washington Nationals took atoe-hold on their bats today and bludgeoned Detroit into defeat, humiliating the Bengals by the lopsided figure of 12-2.

Young Buddy Lewis, the Nats' third sacker, was the only one to go hitless as his mates pounced on four Detroit hurlers for 17 juicy hits, three of them for extra bases. Tubby Taft Wright and Zeke Bonura led the long-distance swatting, but Buddy Myer and Tony Giuliani also did considerable damage with their war clubs.

PETE APPLETON

Bonura Gets Twenty-second

Taft pounded on four hits, including a double and triple, driving in five runs, while Bonura punched his twenty-second home run of the season into the lower left field stands in the seventh inning, going one up on Al Simmons in their private duel.

Peter Appleton, meanwhile, clamped down on the Tiger sluggers with a puzzling brand of twirling that virtually amounted to censorship. He gagged their heavy artillery with five hits, and although he walked seven, was in difficulty only twice. Appleton had stuff and control in the pinches, and was unfathomable with men in scoring position.

Detroit took advantage of one pass to score a run in the second inning, York drawing a base on balls to open the session. He went to third on Foxx's double to left, and scored on Rogell's high fly to Simmons. Two sizzling hits and an infield out accounted for the Tigers' second and final run in the fifth inning.

With one down Morgan rapped a clean single to centerfield. Walker followed with a whistling double down the rightfield line, Morgan going to third. Morgan scored on Gehringer's dribble to Bonura.

Clinched in Sixth

This cut Washington's lead exactly in half, as the Senators had earned three runs in the third, and another in the fourth before Kennedy was removed from the line of fire. And the visitors were silenced only one inning before they broke out in another rash of scoring, driving seven runs over the plate in the sixth, to clinch the game.

Giuliani opened the third with his first hit of the afternoon, and went to second when Appleton dumped a surprising single in leftfield. Case sacrificed and Lewis flied out to Morgan, Giuliani scoring after the catch. Wright's double down the rightfield line scored Appleton, and the pudgy outfielder scored when Bonura ripped a single off Christman's glove.

Giuliani scored Travis with the Nats' fourth run in the fourth inning, after Buddy Myer's single was wasted. Myer opened with a bingle, but was out trying to reach

Havre de Grace Feature to White Cockade; Favorite Last

Bill Ackerman
On Fishing

Bluefish have definitely started on their southern migration, for, over the week-end, surf anglers in the Palm Beach area and as far down as Boynton Inlet and Delray Beach were taking them in good numbers.

ACKERMAN.

The fact that they have started doesn't necessarily mean that our season here is at an end, but it does show that we are in the home stretch. Weather conditions for the next several weeks will be the deciding factor in the length of time they will continue on in our waters.

In the meantime, give them a try anywhere along the western shore from Ridge on up to Shadyside, or up the Patuxent as far as Sandgate, for, regardless of the miserable weather, some reasonably good catches have been made during the past several days.

Mixed pretty well with trout and rock, which would make trolling the best way to take them, yet, for the best sport, chumming is the way now. And chum is just as hard to get as ever. We do not know of any nets in the upper bay that have lifted enough to be worth while, so get it through Milton Gordon at the Atlas Sport Store.

Brought up in 100-pound cases, which measures out about a bushel and a quarter, from Reedville daily, the charge of $2.50 is more than we have been used to paying. But reasonable, when the freezing, packing and haulage is considered, and don't bellyache when you have to go down to 15 Water street to pick it up, for no one on this end is making any profit out of it, and couldn't be expected to handle it in a place of business. Two days is required to get the order through.

• • • •

Fishing with Capt. Leroy Ward out of Herring Bay on Sunday, Congressman Virgil Chapman and Ray Hamilton caught six stripers that averaged close to eight pounds, as well as 16 blues, the largest of which wouldn't go over four. But when you know that is as good as they are doing anywhere, three and four-pound blues are rated as pretty good going.

• • • •

At Ridge, Capt. Taft Tippett reports the blues as the same size, although the catches are running slightly larger. We have several noted, that run from 23 to 43, taken both chumming and trolling.

• • • •

Other reports show better conditions in almost every section. At Fox Hill Levels the large channel bass are biting again. Two real nice ones were taken from this stretch of beach on Sunday, as well as big catches of trout, kings and hardheads.

• • • •

On the Jersey coast there are schools of albachore and bonita, particularly on the Ridge of Beach Haven, where large bluefish tuna up to 300 pounds are feeding under them. That was our choice over the past week-end, but we weather was worse there than here. But not a complete washout, for Lev Raymond raided a lobster boat, for enough of big-clawed crustaeeions to make a perty we'll not forget for many a day.

• • • •

No late reports on the Potomac watershed. As late as Saturday some sections were fishable, but if you are going during the next few days it will be very advisable to check first. Bass have been striking fairly good on the Susquehanna, and at Rock Mill Run there have been quite a few wall pike taken.

Tommy Aiken in his October Outdoor Life fishing news say, "It is high time that salt water fishing became something other than an unorthadox and outlaw sport—let's get together for organization and show the rest of the world we can co-operate for universal sport."

His table of suggested specifications for international use in taking top-striking game fishes is based on rod weight, length, and size of line, balancing the one with the other.

We hope he will succeed in getting world-wide acceptance of standard tackle specifications, for they are badly needed if records are to mean anything at all.

In the past many attempts to do this have been made, the last and most notable by the Salt Water Anglers of America in 1933. To us they appeared more than reasonable and fair, for every club rule in the country was given consideration, and there was only slight revision needed by any individual club to meet them. But all they drew was a storm of criticism, and as far as we know, were never accepted by any other organization.

This latest try of Tommy's does not come because of any change of opinion in this country, but because Clive W. Firth, president of the Game Fishing Association of Australia, writes him for assistance in the formation and establishment of angling rules and regulations, and who knows but but it might take this time for in the past four years fishing clubs have sprung into being all over the world, and if we are to continue to keep world records that are as acceptable to one as to another tackle specifications must be standardized.

• • • •

Last winter the angling achievements of Miss Francis Weir were broadcast over the world when she caught a large marlin on light tackle, but we haven't heard anything about the catches of a 13-year-old New York boy, who in 12 days of fishing at Bimini late in August caught five of 22 blue marlin hooked. The weights of the fish and time required to land were 538 pounds, 55 minutes; 269 pounds, 39 minutes; 240 pounds, 32 minutes; 158 pounds, 9 minutes, and 109 pounds in 17 minutes.

One fish in fast time might have been discounted as a fluke, but when five, one day right after another, are taken into consideration, we think it rates as a real angling feat.

Hill Gelding Wins Sprint, Pays $7.60

Evening Shadow and Spillway Finish 2d and 3d; 5,000 See Gold Flag End Up Badly Beaten

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 19.—White Cockade, apple of the clockers' eyes in workouts before this meeting, made good in a big way today. Third in a sprint here last Saturday, the gelded son of Diavolo came back to sling mud at six others over the 6-furlong course. Racing in the colors of T. J. Hill, White Cockade finished two lengths in advance of E. D. Shaffer's Evening Shadow, which downed Joe W. Brown's Spillway by half a length for second money.

The crowd of 5,000 installed Gold Flag, from the Shandon Farm, as the favorite and the Sun Flag colt finished a convincing last. White Cockade paid $7.60 and went the route over a sloppy track in the good time of 1:12 1-5. Rain fell throughout the program and the fans kept in and under the stands.

White Cockade wrested the lead from Evening Shadow directly after the break and Jockey Charlie Gilbert kept him in front to the end. Evening Shadow and Spillway were second and third all the way.

Fair Rock, representing the Shandon Farm, won as Jockey L. Haas chose in the first race. Six lengths behind this filly came Barraca to be second in front of Ellacaw. Fair Rock and Barraca were tardy in leaving the gate in a poor start. However, Haas soon had Fair Rock in front and the $11.30 shot was not seriously threatened.

Coming over from the half-milers, Mystery Miss made good at the first asking on this track, winning by three lengths in the second race. The C. F. Hockley filly, ridden by Apprentice Beverly Hacker, downed, among others, Sure Miss and Sir Time. The winner paid a healthy $14.10 and completed a $35 daily double.

Hacker came right back with another winner in the third race. The cocky Kentucky boy climbed aboard Owaller, one that couldn't get out of his own way here last week, and brought the Ponce filly home to take a head decision from Lenpola. Nansemond took third money in the group of ten. This was the third drubbing for the favorite players, who backed Dog Flower, Owaller paying $17.50.

ELLACAW, far back in the early stages and blocked entering the stretch, came with a terrific rush in the closing 70 yards. WILD IRISH tired after going forwardly to midstretch. BUD'S KING went evenly. The others were not prominent.

MYSTERY MISS had speed to go to the top at once, saved ground while setting a strong pace and was not extended in the stretch run. SURE MISS outstroke the field, raced forwardly on the outside, but could not menace the winner seriously. SIR TIME, off poorly, worked his way to contention and closed full of run. RACEWAY was closest to the pace while under hustling tactics to the midstretch, but weakened. RED WINGS dropped back after a quarter. NOB had some early foot.

Down In Front

—By Richards Vidmer

Short Cut to Fame

New York, Sept. 19.—Some of the greatest in the sphere of sports follow the long, long trail down the years before they find the laurel wreath of triumph. Some of the greatest never achieve the heights at all, but linger always on the fringe as the fates frown and force them back. But once in a while there comes a youngster who leaps into the championship class with such swiftness that he takes it as a matter of course and wonders why others look at him with envious eyes and a forgivagle twinge of jealousy.

VIDMER.

As the Yankees clinched their third successive American League pennant, I was thinking of Joe DiMaggio and how simple success must seem to him. And thinking of Joe DiMaggio I remembered some of the others who have struggled along the trail and found it hard and rough and never reached the end.

There was Mac Smith, one of the greatest golfers of his generation; always a threat, winner of many minor tournaments, but never the winner of any of the crowns he sought mostthe national open, the British open, the P. G. A. for years he ws rated one of the half dozen best in the game. And for years he was a close competitor when the highest honors were at stake. But he never caught up to one until age caught up to him and called a halt to his competitive efforts.

There is Harry Cooper, of the current crop, accepted as one of the most consistent scorers through the years. But never a champion, always just a stroke or two back.

There was Vinnie Richards who could beat any tennis player in the world—except Tilden. He could even beat Tilden on occasion, but never in the national championships. Richards will go down as one of the greatest players ever to kill a lob or serve an ace, but he never was national champion.

Rapid Rise

And in DiMaggio's own field there was, to mention one of many, Walter Johnson. He pitched through 18 campaigns and his sun was setting before he knew the satisfaction of pitching for a winner. Yet even in those years when Washington finished last, Walter Johnson was recognized as one of the greatest pitchers in the game.

These are only a few of those who have found the trail long and hard, but how simple it must all seem to young Joe DiMaggio. He never has known anything less than triumph. He never has known the heartaches and despair that belong to those who finish second. He has been on top from the very beginning and it probably will be a terrific shock when the day comes and he must look up to someone else.

From the very beginning of his carreer, back with San Francisco in 1933, the way has been smooth and easy. Some players of mapor league abilities linger long in the minors before they are discovered by the scouts that bring them up and give them their chance. But Joe DiMaggio was noticed the first year he player professional baseball. He his safely in 61 consecutive games and immediately the major leagues sat up and took notice of the Italian boy. From then on he was a marked man; marked for a major league trial.

The next year the Yankees bought him for future delivery and he knew he was going up. It was a rapid rise from the sandlots to the big show, but nothing compared to his rise since arriving in the American League.

All the Honors

With only thre months' experience he was selected for the All-Star team in 1936. That fall the Yankees won the pennant. And the World Series. In 1937 he was again selected for the All-Star team, led the league in home runs, and again the Yankees won the pennant and the series. This year for the third tmie he was named a member of the All-Star cast, and now once more the Yankees have won the pennant with high prospects of capturing their third tsraight World Series, something no other team in baseball ever has done.

In short, Joe DiMaggio has never known anything less than the best since his arrival in the major leagues. Three years, three pennant winners, the prospects of three World Series winners, and three All-Star games. Others strive and struggle, hope and despair and never achieve any of those honors. But DiMaggio never has known anything else.

Coffey and Paul Bennett Win Pro-Amateur at Washington

Pair Fires 67; Spencer Also Victor

Beaver Dam Mentor Takes Sweepstakes With 70; Walper and Peacock Second in Day's Main Event

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Rut Coffey, the stocky Winchester professional, who usually manages to win a good share of the prize money after the 75-mile trek for the local tourneys, and his amateur partner, Paul Bennett, of Martinsburg, W. Va., copped the Washington Golf and Country Club Invitation pro-amateur yesterday from a field of 14 teams.

Coffey was 3 under par for 13 holes, and then slipped 4 over on the next five, but his partner came through with a birdie and pars on the finishing numbers as they won the event by a stroke, with a 67.

Cliff Spencer was the only player in the field to match par figures and the Beaver Dam mentor won the prosweepstakes with a perfect card of 35-35, 70. He deuced the second and fourth holes, the latter via a 50-foot putt, and was over on two consecutive holes, nine and ten, where he 3-putted. He parred the other 14.

Leo Walper, driving-range mentor, and Roger Peacock, Indian Spring's former District and Maryland State champion, were second in the proam event with a pair of 34s for a 68. They needed par for a 67 on the seventeenth tee, but Walper drove in the ditch on the semifinal hole, and Peacock 3-putted as they lost the crucial stroke to par. Peacock played steady, near-par golf while Walper birdied the first, and 15-16 in succession.

Coffey's 71 was good for second money in the prosweepstakes affair, the Winchester pro also finding the seventeenth hole a jinx, as he knocked a spoon shot in the ditch, took a 6 and finished with a bogey 5. He was 2 under par preceding the hole, and was playing the course for the first time.

Eddie Bean helped Spencer on the tenth hole, with a par and they finished a stroke out of the money with 69, while also just out of the money in the sweepstakes was George Diffenbaugh, of Kenwood, and Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, with 74s. The latter had 2s on 2 and 11.

Rain Again Balks Forest Hills Play

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 19.—With occasional showers predicted for tomorrow, the 1938 National Singles championships may equal their all-time record of five days' delay because of rain, established by the great "wash-out" journey of 1935.

Three remaining semifinals will be played tomorrow with the finals scheduled for Wednesday.

Donald Budge meets Sidney Wood and Gene Mako meets Jack Bromwich, of Australia in the men's singles tomorrow. Alice Marble and Mrs. Sarah Fabyan meet in the women's singles.

Playgrounds Tennis Tourney Is Postponed

The annual fall invitational tennis tournament, sponsored by the department of playgrounds, was postponed further until next Saturday, it was announced last night, because of inclement weather.

Scheduled to open last Saturday, only four matches were played before rain halted the proceedings. The field of 32 was reduced to 28 as Lieut. Farrin, Hugh Lynch, Austin Rice, and Capt. Tom Sherburne won their initial engagements.

Barney Welsh, slim Rockville ace, continues to rule a favorite, with a quintet of top-ranking Middle-Atlantic players trying to unseat him.

third on Travis' hit to left. Travis went to second on the play.

Al Simmons' single to left started the ball rolling in the big sixth. Myer rapped another hit to right but Travis flied out. Giuliani scored Simmons and put Myer on second with his third hit. Appleton fouled out to Greenberg, but Case coaxed a pass out of Lawson, filling the bases. Lewis walked, forcing in Myer and leaving the hassocks fully populated, before Wright blasted a terrific triple to the left-centerfield screen. Wade relieved Lawson on the mound for Detroit at this juncture, and Bonura applied the finishing punch to the rally with a homer into the leftfield stands.

As if to guard against any scoring error, the Nats scored again in the eighth on Case's single, a passed ball, and Wright's single to left. But, with Appleton showing no inclination to ease up on the Tigers, it was an idle gesture and Washington won under wraps.

Davy

in the low 80s pulled her handicap down to 6, the necessary figure.

When the four local players left for the tourney, Mrs. Davey's odds against even qualifying were highest of the lot. But she had a 46—47, 93, tied Helen Dettweiler for low among the local quartet, and scored six shots lower than Marion Brown and Mrs. Bishop Hill.

Followers of the local players besieged the Post Sports Department last night with phone calls, asking the results of the National play, and when told Mrs. Davy qualified they were surprised, but pleased.

If the improbable should happen today and she should defeat Patty Berg, well it would just make Frank Merriwell and Horatio Alger a pair of sissies.

Navy Tries Wet Pigskin

Middies Work With Wet Ball During Rainy Session at Annapolis

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 19.—Navy's varsity gridmen took advantage of a rain-swept and soggy field to get the feel of handling a wet, slippery ball during a long scrimmage this afternoon that culminated a hard day's work. The morning session was devoted exclusively to fundamentals, but Head Coach Hank Hardwick turned his charges loose in the afternoon.

Hardwick emphasized offensive blocking, covering punts, and recovering fumbles, and was well satisfied with the squad's work. Most notable improvement in blocking was that of Al Bergner, regular tackle, who faced the loss of his position because of his inability to move opposing players out of the way. Bergner is considered one of the East's finest defensive players, but never has shown much offensively.

The same line-up that started last Saturday's game against the Plebes was used intact yesterday, and probably will start in the inaugural against William and Mary this week-end. Smoother work behind the line in handling the ball and timing plays, and a better brand of blocking by the entire play was noticeable.

George Ghesquiere, senior end; Harold Felix, a senior, and Harold Harwood, a "youngster," both centers; all of whom have been in sick bay with injuries, will report back to the squad tomorrow and will be welcome additions. All figure in Hardwick's carefully laid plans, especially Ghesquiere who is certain to see heavy duty. The rest of the players are in good physical condition and barring any unforeseen accidents between now and Saturday will be ready for the Indians.

Only disquieting note marred today's proceedings. Allan Feldmeier, "youngster," guard from Little Falls, N. Y., was dismissed from the squad for an infraction of Academy rules.

The Plebes put in a hard afternoon of scrimmage in an effort to iron out offensive wrinkles before Saturday's curtain raiser with Georgetown's Freshmen, and looked beter than on last Saturday when they met the varsity. Lieut. R. W. Wood, head coach, made one shift in the backfield, reversing the positions of his nos. 3 and 4 backs, Bob Leonard and Wesley Gebert. The boys seemed better suited to their new berths during the workout, and Wood feels that the change will add power to the Plebes' attack. The remainder of the week will be devoted to exclusively to developing the attack.

Wood and Miss Tyson Set Speedboat Marks

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 19 (AP).—Two youngsters—Mollie Tyson, Temple University co-ed, and Gar Wood, jr.—drove their speedboats to new world records today on the Tennessee River.

The new amateur marks were made in races against time over a mile straightaway as the closing events of the national outboard championships.

Young Wood, of Algonac, Mich., battered his own world mark in the 2-mile class B event with an average speed of 53.602 m. p. h. His old time was 53.058 m. p. h.

Los Angeles Wins

San Francisco, Sept. 19 (AP).—The regulation Pacific Coast League baseball season ended yesterday with Los Angeles in first place by 3½ games.

G. W. High Team Drills

Alexandrians Prepare to Open Grid Season Friday; Episcopal Squad Also Busy

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 19.—Local scholastic gridmen settled down to the final week of preparation for the opening of the 1938 season today, with both Episcopal and George Washington High School slated to see action in opening games on Friday. The Maroons journey to Washington to engage Eastern High in the afternoon, while the Presidents remain at home to play host to Fredericksburg High in a floodlight tilt on the G. W. field at 8 o'clock.

While much interest centers in both contests, particular attention is being paid to the G. W.-Fredericksburg clash in view of the fact that it marks the inauguration of a new coaching regime for the local public school. The Presidents are performing under the guidance of Albert Doran, former University of Ohio gridman, who for the past 11 years has served as head ciach at Robert E. Lee High School in Staunton.

The inaugural also provides the initial test for a new Fredericksburg mentor, Ben Plotnicki, of George Washington University, having succeeded Johnny Fenlon, another former Colonial, as head coach. Fenlon resigned last year, to accept a freshman coaching berth at the University of Richmond.

Doran has been blessed with a wealth of veteran material, 14 lettermen having returned from last year's team, but it won't necessarily be an all-veteran team that takes the field for G. W. against Fredericksburg. The new mentor announced at the outset of the practice campaign that every candidate would be given an equal chance, that the lettermen would be forced to "start from scratch," and a number of newcomers haveoccupied prominent spots with the tentative varsity eleven in drills to date. Among the moreoutstanding of the new candidates are "Junior" Edmonds, a 190-pound center aspirant, and Ed Williams, Earl Mumford and Cramer, all backs.

Out at Episcopal, Coach "Bick" Cardwell has only six lettermen to serve as the nucleus for his varsity eleven, but the team has come around in a more than satisfactory manner, as might be attested by last Friday's practicetriumph over Washington and Lee High, in which the Maroons came away on the long end of a 13-0 score.

'Skins Drill Hard for Tilt With Rams

Cleveland Team, Here Sunday, an Improved Outfit; Shows Good Scoring Power, Leads West in Gains

Nursing bruised shins, and in several instances patched up hides—painful reminders of last Sunday's 16-16 stalemate with Brooklyn—the Redskins yesterday turned their attention to Sunday's approaching game with another dark horse—the Cleveland Rams, digging into practice with a vigor that bodes no good for the visitors.

But the Western vista is not a pleasing one for the Tribesmen's sore eyes, for Cleveland, doormat of the league last year, shapes up as a powerful aggregation that will win its share of games this autumn. On paper the Fams shape up similarly to Brooklyn, young, well-balanced and ambitious—and Washington has seen all it wants of Brooklyn, for the present, at least.

Coached by Hugo Bezdek, an old hand in the coaching business, who not only picked up new tricks, but added a variety of his own to keep abreast of football's speeded-up tempo, the Rams have played two games thus far and lost both. But in those games they demonstrated their power and served warning on future opponents that they will be tough to deal with.

The Chicago Cardinals eked out a 7-6 victory over Cleveland in week Green Bay turned back Bezdek's boys, 28-17. In cold print the latter score may seem a convincing margin to the average fan, but Ray Flaherty, Redskin coach, shudders everytime he thinks of it. Two tochdowns and a field goal the Rams scored on Green Bay, which is considerably better than Washington did against the Packers last season, and it is obvious by this time that the '37 Redskins were decidedly stronger than the current outfit.

And, as if to bolster Flaherty's suspicions of the Rams, the league's statistical bureau yesterday released its first cluster of figures on early season work, and Cleveland leads the Western Division in yards gained from scrimmage with 607 yards. Washington leads the Eastern brigade with 645 yards to its credit. The Redskins completed 25 of 39 passes attempted and probably will have an edge in the air, for Cleveland made connections on only 26 of 60 attempts.

Clevelahd is loaded with new and capable talent, not the least of whom is Corby Davis, one of the Nation's outstanding fullbacks last season while performing for Indiana. Jim Benton and Ray Hamilton, ends who played here against George Washington two years ago, also are on the roster, and both are expert pass receivers.

Bob Davis, a triple-threater who starrer at Kentucky before stepping into pro football, is another the Redskins will have to keep a watchful eye on, when he gets into action. Davis is not in the starting line-up, but but is saved for crucial moments. An all-around athlete, a 10-second track man as well as a good baseball player, Davis once fought Fred Apostoli in an A. A. U. tournament.

Ed Goddard, the halfback Washington triad to wheedle away from Brooklyn last year before he went to Cleveland on waivers; Chuck Cherundolo, Ted Livingston, Johnny Drake, who will be remembered for his brilliant play with Purdue, and Jules Alphonse are among the fe wveterans retained from last year's club—and they supply the balance and steadiness so necessary with young talent.

Wood Seeks Race

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 18 (AP).—Gar Wood, sr., of Detroit, American speedboat king, said tonight he would welcome a challenge by Sir Malcolm Campbell, British racer, to meet next year for the Harmsworth Trophy, emblematic of international speedboat supremacy.

Belloise Wins

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Mike Belloise, 128¼, one of the leading contenders for Henry Armstrong's abandoned featherweight title, scored a three-round knockout over Joey Wach, 127¾, in the al-New York headliner, scheduled for eight rounds, at St. Nicholas Palace tonight.

Indians Edge Macks, 4-3; Homer Aids

Jeff Heath Smashes Circuit Drive as Harder Wins 17th; Etten's Error Paves Way for Defeat

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 19.—Jeff Heath's homer helped the Cleveland Indians turn four hits into four runs today and gave Mel Harder his seventeenth victory, against 10 defeats. Philadelphia's Athletics were on the losing end, 4-3.

Harder allowed the Athletics 12 hits, but did not get into serious trouble until the eighth. Johnny Humphries held the A's to none thereafter.

The Indians collected only three bingles off George Caster in his seven innings, but one of them was the first inning circuit blow by Jeff Heath with two aboard. An error by Nick Etten, the A's rookie first baseman, payed the way to the decisive run in the fourth.

Lynwood Rowe Hurls 4-Hit Game, Wins, 6-0

Beaumont, Sept. 19 (AP).—Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe pitched masterful ball today as Beaumont evened the final playoff series with San Antonio, 6 to 0.

The former American League star gave up only four hits and two of these were quite scratchy. The Exporters collected eight hits off three San Antonio pitchers, and half that number were doubles.

World Loan Group Honors Two D. C. Men

Baltz Named American Vice President, James Elected to Council at Zurich Conference

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Two Washingtonians, Edward C. Baltz and C. Clinton James, were honored at the recent international conference of building, savings and loan associations at Zurich, Switzerland. Mr. Baltz, who is president of the United States Building and Loan League, was named American vice president of the International Union of Building Societies and Savings and Loan Associations at the final session of the Zurich congress. He attended the meeting as vice chairman of the American delegation and was one of the principal speakers at the conference. Mr. James was named a member of the International Council of the union at the Zurich meeting, being also in attendance there. He is a past president of the United States Building and Loan League.

Morton Bodfish, executive vice president of the United States Building and Loan League, and well known here, was elected president of the international organization and will preside over the session to be held in America in 1942. He was also a speaker at the congress as well as at the international meeting at Salzburg, three years ago when he was appointed American vice president of the organization.

The formation of the international union of thrift and home financing institutions was an outgrowth of the periodic international congresses which have been held. It represents a forward step in bringing closer cooperation among the institutions which specialize in financing home ownership in nearly a score of countries. Mr. Bodfish succeeded Sir Harold Bellman, of London, as president of the organization. Two previous international congresses have been held in America, the second one in 1915 and the third in 1931. The one at Zurich was the sixth.

Local Housing Loans.

Continued increase in the volume of loans made by local banks under Title I of the amended national housing act is reported from headquarters of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, loans made by member banks totaling 1,570 since February 3, when the amendments became effective.

The latest total compares with one of 1,425 announced September 7, and presents an advance of 145, or an average gain of more than 70 loans a week. Loans in the Title I classification are for alteration, modernization and repair of property and have contributed valuably to the property improvement campaign of bankers, builders and commercial organizations.

Reports from the Federal Housing Administration on the number of Title I loans from February 3, to August 31, indicate a similar advance, statements showing that all lending institutions with headquarters in the District had made 1,521 volume of $536,787 on July 31. It gust 31, compared with 1,219 and a volume of 536,787 on July 31. It was stated further that on July 31, lending institutions with headquarters not necessarily in the District, had made 888 loans on local property, aggregating $375,614, contrast-

No Exchange Closing, Says Federal Official

One of the Administration's highest financial officers said yesterday the stock markets would not be closed in the event of a European war. The official, who declined to be quoted by name, told reporters:

"We call ourselves the financial center of the world and ought to act that way. We must keep our markets open so that the world can trade in them."

He said that only a financial panic which demoralized exchange trading would justify closing financial markets. "There is no indication, no sign, no reason why we should have a panic," he added. "As far as anyone in the Administration that I know envisages, no one wants to close the exchanges."

More Gold Cargos Coming From Europe

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Engagement of an additional $15,800,000 of foreign gold today boosted the inward movement of yellow metal during September so far to $112,518,000. This, according to banking circles, marked a new high in gold shipments for a similar period since the movement started several weeks ago. Lately the flow has been accelerated by the crisis in central Europe.

Of the $15,800,000 reported engaged today $13,300,000 was from England, which has been the source of most of the shipments. The remainder was engaged in Canada.

Business Loans Rise $17,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday a $17,000,000 increase in bank loans to business in the week ended September 14. Loans turned upward for the second week of the month due to larger business credits by banks in major cities outside of New York, where another slight decline was recorded.

Increased commercial, industrial and agricultural loans were reported in the Boston, Richmond, Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis, Dallas and San Francisco Federal Reserve districts.

Steel Operations Continue Advance

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will advance 2 points to 47.3 per cent of capacity, compared with 45.3 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 42.8 per cent of capacity, while a year ago they were 76.1 per cent.

Cotton Higher On Peace Hope

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Cotton was moderately higher today on a more hopeful view of the European situation but prices lost part of their gains under near-month liquidation. December, which had advanced from 7.83 to 7.90, closed at 7.84, with final prices 4 to 9 points net higher.

The market opened 6 to 9 points higher and sold up to net gains of 12 to 15 points on Wall Street, foreign and trade buying, promoted partly by reports France and England had given in to Chancellor Hitler's demands upon Czechoslovakia.

Peace Talk, Export Lack Drops Wheat

Winnipeg Leads Decline in American Markets With Face of 3⅛ Cents Per Bushel

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Disregarding defiant utterances from Czechoslovakia, the Chicago wheat market plunged downward 2⅝ cents today chiefly because of prevailing belief that Europe was headed for peace.

From the outset, prospects for a peaceful solution of the European political crisis pulled prices sharply to lower levels, and prevented rallies of any consequence. Winnipeg led the tumbles in North American quotations, and fell 3⅛ cents a bushel, maximum.

Adding to market handicaps was virtual stoppage of export business, both from Canada and the United States, together with 2,193,000 bushels increase of this country's wheat visible supply.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1⅜-2 cents lower compared with Saturday's finish, December 65-64⅞, May 66⅜-¼, corn ½-1¼ down, September 53¼, December 50¾-⅞, oats ¼ off to ¼ up, and rye showing ½-1¼ drop, with provisions unchanged to 20 cents setback.

Recovery in Stocks, U. S. Bonds and Foreign Currencies, Together With Drop in Wheat, Indicate Faith in Peace Talks

New York, Sept. 19.—Peace in Europe, even though made at the expense of the partition of Czechoslovakia, received the blessing of financial markets today. An upward movement in stocks and a firmer tone in government bonds, some recovery in foreign moneys and a break in wheat, all reflected the conviction that hostilities will be averted. There were few to call it a peace with honor and there were many who regarded the decision of the French and English governments in asking Czechoslovakia to consent to its own dismemberment as merely postponing until some future date an eventual war. But for the moment the war clouds lifted. When the market closed there were indications that the Czech government itself, after a forty-eight hour breathing spell, would accept the British-French compromise solution.

Leaving aside the justice of injustice of this proposed solution, there is no question but that the world breathed easier and financial markets responded to the prospect of peace. Stocks advanced an average of 0.88 point. Of the issues traded in on the big board, 514 advances against only 67 that declined, while 85 were unchanged. Cotton firmed 4 to 9 points, and wheat, which had advanced every time the foreign crisis grew worse, broke 2⅜ cents. It was soft from the beginning, and selling was fostered by a drying up of the export business as well as by the prospect of peace.

Steel Activity Rises

There was an expansion in steel operations today, bringing the rate of the industry to 47.3 per cent of capacity, a jump of 2 points over last week. There has been some hesitancy among steel buyers but after the close today, Cargengie-Illinois, giant subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, cut prices in steel rails and railway equipment $2 to $5 a ton. It was assumed that other fabricators would have to meet the cut, as they did the reductions in other products of some months ago.

Prices of base metals moved in the opposite direction today, copper being advanced to 10⅜ cents a pound, and advances also being made in brass, zinc and lead. The metal and steel shares were in the forefront of today's rising market, United States Steel and Bethlehem adding 1¼ points each. Anaconda was the most active of the metal shares, adding 1⅛. International Nickel was up 1¾, Kennecott a point, American Smeling 2½ and United States Smelting 1⅝.

The individual feature of the day was one of the market's lowest priced shares, Loft. On the basis of a court decision which held that Pepsi-Cola holdings were to be held in trust for Loft instead of remaining in the possession of a former president of Loft, the stock more than doubled. Considerable difficulty was encountered in getting the market opened. Finally 30,000 shares changed hands at 4⅛ compared with Saturday's close of 2. It closed at 4½, plus 2½ of 125 per cent. Its previous high for the year was 2⅞ and its low ¾. Sales in this issue of 120,900 shares accounted for about 14½ per cent of the total share turnover on the big board. Phoenix Securities, which controls Loft, and which is listed on the Curb, also was buoyant.

Motors were active with General Motors and Chrysler following Loft in point of volume and gaining 1½ and 1⅝ points respectively. United States Rubber and Electric Auto-Lite, in the accessory division, added about 2 points each. Store stocks were uniformly higher, Montgomery Ward being the most active and advancing 1¼.

Most Bonds Higher

Listed bond trading was quiet today with the tone better in most departments. Gains were numerous, but there also were numerous recessions, especially among railroad bonds. United States Treasury issues improved slightly, and the gains in foreign bonds extended even to Czechs, although that country seemed destined for the political carving knife. Uncertainty about the rail wage problem held back many of the carrier bonds. Trading in all issues totaled $4,130,000.

Czech governments 8s of 1951 and 1952 moved up 1¼ points each, despite the moves for dismembering the country. In bond circles the gains are attributed to a short squeeze. Prague 7½s fell 2 points. Italian and German issues were marked sharply higher, irrespective of the default standing of the latter loans. Belgian and Scandinavian issues did well. The British empire bonds of Canadian and Australian origin were irregular, and Latin-American default loans showed customary dullness.

The more volatile carrier bonds in the domestic section showed gains from fractions to 3 points. Nickel Plate, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway bonds were in best demand. Some sizable losses appeared, however, in bonds of various other roads. Holding company issues were irregular, and local tractions showed side swings in either direction. Convertibles advanced on the gains in related stocks. Communications, amusement and other special groups were uncertain.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 16—The stock exchange closed on an irregular note today with extreme caution still prevailing as traders awaited outcome of the Anglo-French deal to avoid war. Transatlantics were in demand early but reacted under profit taking. British funds were uneven. Oils and rubbers held firm and light demand appeared for coppers and kaffirs. Small gains and losses were scattered among industrials.

Paris quotations in the bourse were steady in quiet dealings today. Rentes closed 15 centimes lower to 110 higher. Bank of France advanced 125 francs, while Royal Dutch dipped 17 and Suez Canal 200.

Liverpool—General liquidation carried wheat futures 1¾d to 2d lower today following improvement in the central European situation. Earlier prices held steady under continued firm Australian offerings. Cotton closed 1 higher to 4 lower with business mostly for trade account.

A MORON! HOW DREADFUL!
ACCORDING TO WILLARD J. FUNK, AN UNUSUALLY BRIGHT DOG HAS A RECOGNITION VOCABULARY OF 204 WORDS

Bob Burns Says—

To read some of the speeches about how big business is being abused, you'd think that this is the first time in history when people have not been sympathetic with corporations. When I was a boy down home, the only corporation we knew of was the railroad, and every time the circuit court convened, there would be at least a dozen cases where farmers was suin' the railroad company for runnin' over a cow.

I remember one time when the railroad lawyer got up to plead his case, he noticed there were only 11 men in the jury. When he spoke to the judge about it, one of the jurymen got up and says, "That's all right, judge, don't worry about it—Bill Hocks had to go home and tend to a sick hog, but he left his verdict with me."
